Memorandum 64-98

Subject: Study No. 34(L) - Derivation and Disposition Tables to be included in pamphlet containing Evidence Code

Attached are four Tables that we have prepared for use during the period prior to the publication of the pamphlet containing the Evidence Code.

Table 1 permits you to determine whether there is an existing section (that will be superseded by the Evidence Code) which covers the same subject matter as an Evidence Code section.

Table 2 permits you to determine whether the subject matter of an existing section (that will be superseded by the Evidence Code) is covered in the Evidence Code.

Tables 3 and 4 are designed to permit persons who are familiar with the printed tentative recommendations (containing the revised Uniform Rules) to determine where the same matter is covered in the Evidence Code and the printed tentative recommendations. These tables have only a temporary value. The Comments to the Evidence Code, when published, will supersede the Comments contained in the tentative recommendations.

Table 3 permits you to determine the pertinent revised rule that covers the subject matter dealt with by a particular Evidence Code section.

Table 4 permits you to find the particular Evidence Code section that is based on a particular revised rule. These two tables provide a useful means of going from one publication to another.

The staff believes that it is desirable to include (in the publication containing the Evidence Code) all pertinent references under the particular Evidence Code section: references to pertinent provisions of the Uniform Rules, references to comparable continued sections, references to superseded sections, and cross-references to pertinent sections of the Evidence Code and other codes. Thus, we suggest that under each Evidence Code section the following be included (in addition to the Comment):

CROSS REFERENCES

References to pertinent Evidence Code sections and sections of existing continued statutes

COMPARABLE SECTIONS

References to comparable sections of the Evidence Code (for example, some sections of the Privileges Division are comparable to other sections of the Privileges Division). Also, some of the preliminary provisions are the same as or similar to sections in the C.C.P. or other codes and the reference would be made to these comparable sections in other codes.

UNIFORM RULES OF EVIDENCE

Reference to the portion of the Uniform Rules of Evidence covering the same subject matter, without regard to whether the Evidence Code section is based on the Uniform Rules. (In some cases may have one reference for entire Division of Evidence Code.)

COLLATERAL REFERENCES

Reference to the research study covering the particular subject dealt with by the Evidence Code section. (In some cases may have one reference for entire Division of Evidence Code.)

SUPERSEDED STATUTES

Citation to statute sections that are superseded by the particular Evidence Code section.

In the First Supplement to Memorandum 64-98, we plan (if time permits) to set out for each section of the Evidence Code the information outlined above. If the Commission approves this general scheme for the publication containing the Evidence Code, we believe that the tables attached are satisfactory without revision for publication, but consideration should be given to omitting Tables 3 and 4 from the publication containing the Evidence Code.

Respectfully submitted,

John H. DeMouly
Executive Secretary

EVIDENCE CODE TO COMPARABLE SECTIONS

Table 1 indicates as to each section of the Evidence Code the comparable provisions of the California law in effect on January 1, 1965, that are superseded by the Evidence Code. Where the table indicates that a section in the Evidence Code supersedes an existing provision, the section replacing the existing provision may duplicate the superseded section or may be narrower or broader than the superseded section. For a discussion of the comparison, see the Comment to the Evidence Code section involved.

The source of each section in the Evidence Code that does not supersede a specific provision in existing law is listed as "New." For example, some sections in the Evidence Code (principally the preliminary provisions and definitions) are based on comparable provisions in other recently enacted California codes, such as the Commercial Code and the Vehicle Code, and do not supersede any specific provision in existing law. For the source of a particular section, see the Comment to the Evidence Code section involved. See also Table 3 for an indication of a source in the Revised Rules of Evidence.

EXISTING LAW TO EVIDENCE CODE

Table 2 indicates as to each superseded section of the California law in effect on January 1, 1965, the comparable provisions of the Evidence Code. Where the table indicates that an existing section is superseded by a provision in the Evidence Code, the provision replacing the existing section may duplicate the superseded section or may be narrower or broader than the superseded section. For a discussion of the comparison, see the Comment to the Evidence Code section involved. See also the Comment to the repealed section.

The disposition of an existing section that is not superseded by a specific provision in the Evidence Code is listed as "Not continued." The Comment to the repealed section gives the reason for its exclusion.

In addition to Evidence Code references, Table 2 also contains a reference to sections added to other codes that continue the substance of an existing section that is repealed but is not a proper subject for inclusion in the Evidence Code.

EVIDENCE CODE TO REVISED RULES

Table 3 indicates as to each section of the Evidence Code the comparable provisions in the Uniform Rules of Evidence as revised by the Law Revision Commission (referred to in the table as "Revised Rules"). The Revised Rules are contained in separate pamphlets that are compiled in Volume 6 of the Commission's REPORTS, RECOMMENDATIONS, AND STUDIES. Each pamphlet contains the tentative recommendation of the California Law Revision Commission on an article in the Uniform Rules of Evidence, as follows: Article I. General Provisions (Rules 1-8); Article II. Judicial Notice (Rules 9-12); Article III. Burden of Producing Evidence, Burden of Proof, and Presumptions (Rules 13-16 [omitted and proposed as Sections 500-667]); Article IV. Witnesses (Rules 17-22); Article V. Privileges (Rules 22.3-40.5); Article VI. Extrinsic Policies Affecting Admissibility (Rules 41-55); Article VII. Expert and Other Opinion Testimony (Rules 55.5-61); Article VIII. Hearsay Evidence (Rules 62-66.1); Article IX. Authentication and Content of Writings (Rules 67-72).

Generally speaking, the Evidence Code sections are substantially the same as the Revised Rule referred to. In some cases, however, the Evidence Code section may be narrower or broader than the Revised Rule. For a discussion of the comparison, see the Comment to the Evidence Code section involved and compare the Comment to the Revised Rule referred to. Where there is no provision in the Revised Rules comparable to an Evidence Code section, the table so indicates by the word "None."

Table 4 indicates as to each Revised Rule (and as to each subdivision of those revised Rules that are divided into subdivisions) the comparable provisions in the Evidence Code. The Revised Rules are contained in separate pamphlets that are compiled in Volume 6 of the Commission's REPORTS, RECOMMENDATIONS, AND STUDIES. Each pamphlet contains the tentative recommendation of the California Law Revision Commission on an article in the Uniform Rules of Evidence, as follows: Article I. Generally speaking, the Evidence Code sections are substantially the same as the Revised Rules referred to. In some cases, however, the Evidence Code section may be narrower or broader than the Revised Rule. For a discussion of the comparison, see the Comment to the Revised Rule involved and compare the Comment to the Evidence Code section referred to.
