

Memorandum 2012-48

Common Interest Development Law:
Commercial and Industrial Subdivisions
(Comments on Tentative Recommendation)

At its August 2011 meeting, the Commission began a study of the scope of application of Business and Professions Code Section 11010.3 and Civil Code Section 1373. Those provisions exempt commercial and industrial subdivisions from the Subdivided Lands Act (Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 11000-11200) and from some provisions of the Davis-Stirling Common Interest Development Act (Civ. Code §§ 1350-1379). The main thrust of the study is to consider whether the existing exemptions should be broadened so that they would apply to any subdivision that is entirely “nonresidential,” regardless of whether the subdivision is used for “commercial” or “industrial” purposes.

This study complements a separate study that the Commission recently concluded, which examined which provisions of the Davis-Stirling Common Interest Development Act should apply to commercial and industrial common interest developments. See Commercial and Industrial Common Interest Developments (Aug. 2012).

In August 2012, the Commission circulated a tentative recommendation on Commercial and Industrial Subdivisions, with a public comment deadline of November 1, 2012. In a nutshell, the Commission provisionally recommended that the existing exemptions be broadened slightly, to apply to all “nonresidential” subdivisions. The term “nonresidential subdivision” would be defined to mean any subdivision in which residential use is not permitted, either by law or pursuant to recorded property use restrictions. (An exception would be made for specified incidental or transitory residential uses.)

The Commission has not received any public comment in response to the tentative recommendation. This is not too surprising, as most of the groups that are interested in the topic have been providing their input from the

Any California Law Revision Commission document referred to in this memorandum can be obtained from the Commission. Recent materials can be downloaded from the Commission’s website (www.clrc.ca.gov). Other materials can be obtained by contacting the Commission’s staff, through the website or otherwise.

The Commission welcomes written comments at any time during its study process. Any comments received will be a part of the public record and may be considered at a public meeting.

commencement of the study. Moreover, many of the groups that have actively participated in the Commission's prior study of common interest development law are primarily interested in the effect of that law on residential property owners. This study would have no effect on any subdivision that contains a residence, and so is likely to be of little concern to residential stakeholders.

The staff has attached a draft of a final recommendation. The draft is largely identical to the tentative recommendation, with a small number of minor changes to reflect (1) the procedural posture of a final recommendation and (2) the enactment AB 805 (Torres) (which will repeal the existing Davis-Stirling Act and continue it with new section numbers elsewhere in the Civil Code). See 2012 Cal. Stat. ch. 180.

Unless concerns are raised before or at the Commission's December meeting, the staff recommends that the Commission approve the attached draft as its final recommendation. If the recommendation is approved, it might be possible to introduce implementing legislation in 2013.

Respectfully submitted,

Brian Hebert
Executive Director

#H-858

STATE OF CALIFORNIA

CALIFORNIA LAW REVISION COMMISSION

STAFF DRAFT

RECOMMENDATION

Nonresidential Subdivisions

December 2012

California Law Revision Commission
4000 Middlefield Road, Room D-2
Palo Alto, CA 94303-4739
650-494-1335
<commission@clrc.ca.gov>

SUMMARY OF RECOMMENDATION

Business and Professions Code Section 11010.3 exempts “commercial” and “industrial” subdivisions — i.e., subdivisions that are limited to commercial or industrial uses by zoning or a recorded declaration — from the requirements of the Subdivided Lands Act. Similarly, Civil Code Section 1373 exempts commercial and industrial subdivisions from specified provisions of the Davis-Stirling Common Interest Development Act.

The legislative history of the Subdivided Lands Act and the Davis-Stirling Common Interest Development Act suggests that, when originally enacted, those statutes were only intended to regulate residential subdivisions. When it was discovered that they also applied to nonresidential subdivisions, express exemptions were added for business property.

However, because of the way that those exemptions are phrased, they may have a narrower effect than was intended. Specifically, the exemptions do not appear to govern the following types of nonresidential subdivisions:

- (1) A subdivision that is limited to nonresidential uses, where the permitted uses are neither “commercial” nor “industrial” (e.g., a subdivision comprised of storage units, parking spaces, or boat slips that are used by their owners for private noncommercial purposes).
- (2) A subdivision that is limited to nonresidential uses by a law other than a zoning law (e.g., a non-zoning statute that prohibits residential use of property near a hazardous waste area).
- (3) A commercial subdivision where the owners are permitted to operate businesses that provide residential accommodations to their customers. Despite the nature of such a business, the property owner’s use is nonresidential.

The Commission recommends that the exemptions be revised to make them applicable to all nonresidential subdivisions. This would effectuate the apparent legislative intent and would help to eliminate unnecessary regulatory costs.

This recommendation was prepared pursuant to Resolution Chapter 98 of the Statutes of 2009.

NONRESIDENTIAL SUBDIVISIONS

1 Business and Professions Code Section 11010.3 exempts “commercial” and 2 “industrial” subdivisions — i.e., subdivisions that are limited to commercial or 3 industrial uses by zoning or a recorded declaration — from the requirements of the 4 Subdivided Lands Act.¹ Similarly, Civil Code Section 1373 exempts commercial
5 and industrial subdivisions from specified provisions of the Davis-Stirling
6 Common Interest Development Act (hereafter “Davis-Stirling Act”).²

7 The legislative history of the Subdivided Lands Act and the Davis-Stirling
8 Common Interest Development Act suggests that, when originally enacted, those 9 statutes were only intended to regulate residential subdivisions. When it was 10 discovered that they also applied to nonresidential subdivisions, express 11 exemptions were added for business property.

12 However, because of the way that those exemptions are phrased, they may have 13 a narrower effect than was intended. Specifically, the exemptions do not appear to 14 govern the following types of nonresidential subdivisions:

- 15 (1) A subdivision that is limited to nonresidential uses, where the permitted uses 16 are neither “commercial” nor “industrial” (e.g., a subdivision comprised of 17 storage units, parking spaces, or boat slips that are used by their owners for 18 private noncommercial purposes).
- 19 (2) A subdivision that is limited to nonresidential uses by a law other than a 20 zoning law (e.g., a non-zoning statute that prohibits residential use of 21 property near a hazardous waste area).
- 22 (3) A commercial subdivision where the owners are permitted to operate
23 businesses that provide residential accommodations to their customers.
24 Despite the nature of such a business, the property owner’s use is 25 nonresidential.

26 For the reasons discussed below, the Commission recommends that the 27 exemptions be revised to make them applicable to all nonresidential subdivisions.

28 SUBDIVIDED LANDS ACT

29 Purpose and Effect of the Subdivided Lands Act

30 The Subdivided Lands Act regulates the sale or lease of lots or parcels within a 31 “subdivision” or “subdivided lands,”³ in order to protect consumers against “fraud

1. Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 11000-11200.

2. Civ. Code §§ 1350-1378. (On January 1, 2014, Civ. Code §§ 1350-1378 will be repealed and continued as Civ. Code §§ 4000-6150. See 2012 Cal. Stat. ch. 180.)

3. As a general rule, the synonymous terms “subdivision” and “subdivided lands” mean “improved or unimproved land or lands, wherever situated within California, divided or proposed to be divided for the purpose of sale or lease or financing, whether immediate or future, into five or more lots or parcels.”

1 and sharp practices” by subdividers.⁴ The Act achieves its purpose by requiring
2 that a subdivider, before selling or leasing any lots within a regulated subdivision,
3 obtain a “public report” from the Real Estate Commissioner.

4 On applying for a public report, a subdivider must provide a wide range of 5 detailed information about the subdivision, including information about the status
6 of title, the proposed terms of sale, access to public utilities, any restrictions on use
7 or occupancy, any lien that may exist on the property, any existing or proposed 8 indebtedness incurred for the construction of promised facilities, the location of 9 public schools, the presence of nearby airports, and specified geological and soil
10 conditions.⁵

11 A subdivider must also demonstrate compliance with a number of substantive 12 requirements, including requirements intended to ensure that the subdivider will 13 deliver the property in the promised condition, for the promised price, with 14 protection against blanket encumbrances.⁶

15 If the subdivision is also a common interest development, the subdivider must 16 demonstrate that reasonable arrangements have been made for completion of the 17 project, transfer of ownership and control, and ongoing operation and 18 maintenance.⁷ The subdivider must also submit a draft declaration of covenants, 19 conditions, and restrictions that makes reasonable arrangements on a number of 20 specified operational issues.⁸

21 On receipt of a complete application for a public report, the Real Estate
22 Commissioner must review the substance of the application and, unless there are

Bus. & Prof. Code § 11000(a). Common interest developments are expressly included in the definition of “subdivision” or “subdivided lands.” See Bus. & Prof. Code § 11004.5.

4. In re Sidebotham, 12 Cal. 2d 434, 436, 85 P.2d 453 (1938) (“The object of the present law, prevention of fraud and sharp practices in a type of real estate transaction peculiarly open to such abuses, is obviously legitimate; and the method, involving investigation and disclosure of certain essential facts, and a protection for the innocent purchaser against loss of his land by foreclosure of the underlying mortgage, is perfectly reasonable.”). See also Property Owners of Whispering Palms, Inc. v. Court of Appeal, 132 Cal. App. 4th 666, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 845 (2005) (“The Act is a consumer protection statute intended primarily to prevent ‘fraud and sharp practices’ by requiring disclosure of all relevant information to potential purchasers and lessees...”); Westbrook v. Summerfield, 154 Cal. App. 2d 761, 766, 316 P.2d 691 (1957) (“purpose of Subdivided Lands Act is to protect individual members of the public who purchase lots or homes from subdividers and to make sure that full information will be given to all purchasers concerning public utility functions and other essential facts with reference to the land.”).

5. Bus. & Prof. Code § 11010(b). See also Bus. & Prof. Code § 11010.05 (special notice for senior citizen housing development); 10 Cal. Code Regs. §§ 2792 (standard subdivision), 2792.1 (common interest development).

6. Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 11013-11013.4. See generally, Miller, Starr & Regalia, California Real Estate Subdivision Offerings, Sales, and Leasing § 25C:33 (2007 update).

7. Bus. & Prof. Code § 11018.5.

8. Bus. & Prof. Code § 11018.5(e); 10 Cal. Code Regs. §§ 2792.4(b), 2792.15-2792.21, 2792.23-2792.24, 2792.26-2792.28.

1 grounds for denial, issue a public report.⁹ The subdivider is then free to sell or 2 lease lots in the subdivision.

3 Grounds for denial of a report include failure to comply with the Subdivided
4 Lands Act; misrepresentation, deceit, or fraud; and the inability of the subdivider
5 to meet a number of substantive requirements relating to transfer of title and the 6 condition of the property.¹⁰

7 The subdivider must provide a copy of the public report to a prospective
8 purchaser.¹¹ The public report must also be made available for public inspection.¹²

9 Purpose and Effect of Business and Professions Code Section 11010.3

10 Business and Professions Code Section 11010.3 provides a complete exemption
11 from the Subdivided Lands Act for a subdivision that is restricted to commercial 12 or industrial uses by zoning or by a recorded declaration of covenants, conditions, 13 and restrictions.

14 The original version of the exemption was enacted in 1969. At that time, it only 15 applied to “expressly zoned industrial subdivisions which are limited in use to 16 industrial purposes” and “commercial leases of parcels in a shopping center.”¹³

17 The author of the bill enacting that exemption explained that the Subdivided
18 Lands Act had only been intended to apply to residential subdivisions:

19 [The] Subdivided Lands Act was placed there when only residential
20 subdivisions were conceived and used in California. It is only in the past 20 years
21 that industrial subdivisions have spread all over the State.¹⁴

22 Once it became apparent that the Subdivided Lands Act applied to commercial and 23 industrial subdivisions, the exemption was enacted to eliminate that application.

24 As the legislative history explained, purchasers of nonresidential property in 25 industrial subdivisions and shopping centers do not require the protections that 26 were provided by the Subdivided Lands Act,¹⁵ in part because they are presumed 27 to be more sophisticated than residential property purchasers.¹⁶ Furthermore, there

9. Bus. & Prof. Code § 11018.

10. Id.

11. Bus. & Prof. Code § 11018.1.

12. Id.

13. See 1969 Cal. Stat. ch. 373.

14. Letter from Assembly Member Hayes to Governor Reagan (July 27, 1969) (attached to Commission Staff Memorandum 2011-29 (July 13, 2011), at Exhibit p. 1). The Department of Finance expressed a similar view in an enrolled bill report, noting that the Subdivided Lands Act had been “designed primarily for residential subdivisions.” Department of Finance, Enrolled Bill Report on AB 63 (Hayes) (attached to Commission Staff Memorandum 2011-29 (July 13, 2011), at Exhibit p. 4).

15. Department of Finance, Enrolled Bill Report on AB 63 (Hayes) (attached to Commission Staff Memorandum 2011-29 (July 13, 2011), at Exhibit p. 4).

16. Letter from California Real Estate Association to Governor Reagan (July 27, 1969) (attached to Commission Staff Memorandum 2011-29 (July 13, 2011), at Exhibit p. 6).

1 are practical differences between nonresidential and residential subdivisions that
2 make it difficult or unhelpful for a commercial or industrial subdivider to comply
3 with the Subdivided Lands Act.¹⁷

4 The Legislature has amended the exemption provision twice to broaden its 5 scope. In 1974, the provision was amended to replace the narrow category of 6 “shopping centers,” with the broader “commercial use” category.¹⁸ In 2000, the 7 amendment was broadened again, to include any subdivision that is limited to 8 commercial or industrial use by a recorded declaration (in addition to any 9 subdivision that is restricted to such uses by zoning).¹⁹

10 DAVIS-STIRLING COMMON INTEREST
11 DEVELOPMENT ACT

12 Purpose and Effect of the Davis-Stirling Common Interest Development Act

13 The Davis-Stirling Act was enacted in 1985,²⁰ to consolidate and generalize the 14 law that governed condominiums, so that it would also apply to other types of 15 “common interest developments”²¹ — i.e., planned developments, community
16 apartment projects, and stock cooperatives.²²

17 At the time of enactment, the Davis-Stirling Act was relatively modest in scope.
18 It consisted of only 23 sections, most of which were enabling provisions,
19 authorizing and defining the common interest development property ownership
20 form.²³ Only a few provisions regulated the operation of a common interest
21 development’s managing association.²⁴

17. For example, a commercial developer may defer making many infrastructure decisions until after lots have been sold, so that the infrastructure can be better tailored to the needs of the eventual property owners. This makes it difficult to provide the Real Estate Commissioner with information about those improvements prior to the sale of the lots. Id. at Exhibit pp. 5-6. Department of Finance, Enrolled Bill Report on AB 63 (Hayes) (attached to Commission Staff Memorandum 2011-29 (July 13, 2011), at Exhibit p. 3).

18. 1974 Cal. Stat. ch. 606.

19. 2000 Cal. Stat. ch. 279.

20. 1985 Cal. Stat. ch. 874.

21. In general, a “common interest development” is a real property development in which ownership of a separate interest is coupled with an interest in common area property. See Civ. Code § 1351(b), (d), (f), (k), (l), (m).

22. Civ. Code § 1351(c).

23. See generally 1985 Cal. Stat. ch. 874.

24. See former Sections 1363 (existence, powers, and duties of managing association), 1365 (financial statements of association), 1366-1367 (assessments); 1985 Cal. Stat. ch. 874.

1 The Davis-Stirling Act has been amended numerous times since its original
2 enactment and has more than tripled in size.²⁵ While the original enabling 3 provisions remain, most of the statute is now regulatory in character, with 4 numerous provisions imposing detailed mandatory operational procedures for 5 rulemaking,²⁶ board meetings,²⁷ dispute resolution,²⁸ member elections,²⁹ record
6 inspection,³⁰ accounting and budgeting,³¹ and the imposition and collection of 7 assessments.³²

8 Purpose and Effect of Civil Code Section 1373

9 Civil Code Section 1373 exempts commercial and industrial common interest
10 developments from specified provisions of the Davis-Stirling Act. The section was 11 enacted in 1988, shortly after the enactment of the original Davis-Stirling Act.³³

12 The legislative history of Section 1373 suggests that the Legislature had not 13 originally intended for the Davis-Stirling Act to have any application to 14 nonresidential common interest developments.³⁴

15 Two years after the Davis-Stirling Act was enacted, when it became apparent
16 that the Act also applied to commercial and industrial CIDs, a bill was introduced 17 to entirely exempt such developments from the Davis-Stirling Act.³⁵ However,
18 persons representing commercial property owners objected to that approach, 19 noting that some provisions of the Act were beneficial for all CIDs, regardless of 20 type.³⁶ The bill was amended to instead exempt commercial and industrial CIDS

25. The Act is now comprised of 94 code sections, some of them many pages in length. See Civ. Code §§ 1350-1378.

26. Civ. Code §§ 1357.100-1357.150.

27. Civ. Code §§ 1363.05, 1363.09.

28. Civ. Code §§ 1363.810-1363.850, 1369.510-1369.590, 1375-1375.1.

29. Civ. Code §§ 1363.03-1363.04, 1363.09.

30. Civ. Code § 1365.2.

31. Civ. Code §§ 1365, 1365.2.5, 1365.3-1365.5.

32. Civ. Code §§ 1365.1, 1366.2-1367.6.

33. 1988 Cal. Stat. ch. 123. Note that Civil Code Section 1373 was given the same scope of application as the exemption in Business and Professions Code Section 11010.3. Compare 1988 Cal. Stat. ch. 123 with 1980 Cal. Stat. ch. 1336.

34. See letter from Jerold L. Miles to Michael Krisman (Sept. 16, 1986) (on file with Commission) (“In a recent conversation between my partner Bob Thomson and Assemblyman Davis, Assemblyman Davis assured Mr. Thomson that the act was intended to apply only to residential projects.”); Office of Local Government Affairs, Enrolled Bill Report on AB 2484 (May 23, 1988) (on file with Commission) (“According to the consultant for the Assembly Housing Committee, the Davis-Stirling Act was enacted to benefit residential common interest developments. However, the language of the Davis-Stirling Act inadvertently included commercial and industrial developments.”) (emphasis added).

35. AB 2484 (Hauser) (1987).

36. See, e.g., letter from Jeffrey G. Wagner to Assembly Member Daniel Hauser (June 12, 1987) (attached to Commission Staff Memorandum 2008-63 (Dec. 2, 2008), at Exhibit pp. 1-2); letter from F.

1 from those provisions of the Act that are beneficial to residential property owners
2 but unnecessary and burdensome for commercial or industrial property owners.³⁷

3 Civil Code Section 1373 was enacted in that form.³⁸ In effect, the section
4 preserved the application of the Davis-Stirling Act’s foundational provisions 5 (those that define the basic property ownership and governance structure for 6 CIDs), while exempting commercial and industrial CIDs from the act’s
7 operational regulations (those that impose mandatory procedures for the operation
8 of a CID’s governing association).³⁹

9 A committee analysis of the bill that added Section 1373 identified the following
10 rationale for the exemption of commercial and industrial common interest
11 developments from the operational regulations of the Davis-Stirling Act:

12 1. Commercial and industrial common interest developments are business
13 endeavors in which the parties engage the professional services of attorneys,
14 accountants, management companies, and developers. Unlike groups of neighbors 15 providing for the governance of their living conditions, these business people are 16 well informed and governed by other provisions of commercial law.

17 2. The operational needs of commercial and industrial common interest 18 developments are different than those of a residential association, e.g., “An 19 individual business owner’s assessment may increase disproportionately, but 20 fairly, in a given assessment period based on business expansion, change of use,
21 or other negotiated factors, such as an extrahazardous use which raises insurance 22 premiums.”

23 3. Business parks often add amenities and new facilities as the park is 24 developed. Increased assessments are needed in a timely manner to pay for 25 improvements. Unlike residential owners, business owners pass these increased 26 costs on to their customers.

Scott Jackson to Assembly Member Hauser (June 29, 1987) (on file with Commission); letter from Donna L. May to Michael Krisman (May 7, 1987) (on file with Commission).

37. See Civ. Code § 1373(b) (“The Legislature finds that the [provisions declared inapplicable to commercial or industrial CIDs] may be appropriate to protect purchasers in residential common interest developments, however, the provisions are not necessary to protect purchasers in commercial or industrial developments since the application of those provisions results in unnecessary burdens and costs for these types of developments.”). See also Assembly Floor Analysis of AB 2484 (Jan. 19, 1988), p. 1 (specified provisions of Davis-Stirling Act were “enacted to benefit residential common interest developments”); Assembly Committee on Housing and Community Development Analysis of AB 2484 (Jan. 11, 1988), p. 1 (specified provisions of Davis-Stirling Act were “enacted primarily to regulate and benefit residential common interest developments”); Senate Committee on Housing and Urban Affairs Analysis of AB 2484 (May 12, 1987), p. 1 (specified provisions of Davis-Stirling Act were “designed to protect individuals in residential common interest developments”); Committee Statement of Assembly Member Hauser on AB 2484 (on file with Commission) (problems to be solved by Davis-Stirling Act “revolved around residential subdivisions”).

38. 1988 Cal. Stat. ch. 123.

39. For further discussion of the distinction between foundational and operational provisions of the Davis-Stirling Act, see Commercial and Industrial Common Interest Developments, __ California L. Revision Comm’n Reports __ (Aug. 2012).

1 4. Regulatory requirements designed to protect individuals in residential 2 developments are inappropriate in business developments, interfere with 3 commerce, and increase the costs of doing business.⁴⁰

4 In addition, express legislative findings were included in Section 1373(b),
5 declaring:

6 The Legislature finds that the [provisions declared inapplicable to commercial
7 and industrial CIDs] are appropriate to protect purchasers in residential common 8 interest developments, however, the provisions may not be necessary to protect 9 purchasers in commercial or industrial developments since the application of 10 those provisions could result in unnecessary burdens and costs for these types of 11 developments.

12 Those rationales were based in part on the assumption that business property 13 owners generally have greater sophistication than residential property owners and 14 greater access to professional resources to aid them in purchasing or managing 15 business property. While the assumption of greater sophistication and resources is 16 likely to be true as a general proposition, it will not be true in every case. Some 17 business owners will be less sophisticated, and some residential property owners
18 will be more sophisticated. However, there is good reason to believe that a typical 19 business owner who purchases real property for the operation of a business is a 20 sophisticated actor.⁴¹

21 Section 1373 has only been amended three times by the Legislature. The first
22 two amendments were made in connection with Law Revision Commission
23 recommendations, in order to exempt commercial and industrial common interest

40. Senate Rules Committee Analysis of AB 2484 (Hauser) (May 18, 1988), pp. 2-3. See also Assembly Floor Analysis of AB 2484 (Jan. 19, 1988) (on file with Commission); Assembly Committee on Housing and Community Development Analysis of AB 2484 (Jan. 11, 1988) (on file with Commission); Senate Committee on Housing and Urban Affairs Analysis of AB 2484 (May 12, 1987) (on file with Commission); Committee Statement of Assembly Member Hauser on AB 2484 (on file with Commission).

41. As the California Association of Community Managers observes, in a letter to the Commission:

The following two demographic facts differentiate the purchaser of a commercial building or unit from the purchaser of a residence:

(1) Approximately 90% of the owners who purchase buildings or commercial units in the associations own them as a corporation, LLC, trust or partnership. Almost all of these, whether they are owned as noted above or as individuals/joint tenants, own and operate an incorporated business within the building or unit. These parties are sophisticated. They have hired legal counsel to form their legal entities and have the legal and financial resources to hire legal counsel when they believe it appropriate to protect their interests.

(2) The typical purchase price, represented as the middle 70% of the building or units sold today, varies between $1,000,000 - $4,000,000. The purchase and sale of these buildings and units are typically facilitated by one or more attorneys, who are obligated to protect the interests of their clients through the diligence process. In summary, these are parties who have the sophistication to manage businesses, take advantage of legal and tax opportunities presented to such businesses and to purchase multi-million dollar buildings for the tax and estate benefits provided thereby.

See Commission Staff Memorandum 2008-63 (Dec. 2, 2008), at Exhibit p. 4.

1 developments from new regulatory provisions⁴² that the Commission had 2 recommended.⁴³ The Commission recognized that its recommendations had been 3 developed to benefit residential property owners, without any separate
4 consideration of their effect on nonresidential property. Rather than inadvertently
5 impose inappropriate regulatory burdens on commercial or industrial property
6 owners, the existing exemption was expanded to include the new reforms.

7 The third amendment was made in 2011, to exempt commercial and industrial 8 common interest developments from a new provision⁴⁴ that protects an owner's
9 existing right to lease separate interest property.⁴⁵

10 POLICY RATIONALE FOR REGULATION OF 11 RESIDENTIAL PROPERTY

12 As discussed above, the legislative history of the exemption provisions strongly 13 suggests that the Subdivided Lands Act and the operational provisions of the 14 Davis-Stirling Act were enacted in order to protect residential property owners, 15 without any intention that they apply to nonresidential property.

16 Residential subdivisions have two important attributes that justify special 17 regulatory protection.

18 As explained below, nonresidential subdivisions do not possess those attributes.
19 Therefore, laws enacted to protect residential property may not be necessary or 20 appropriate for nonresidential property.

21 Residential Property is a Uniquely Important Investment

22 Residential property is a uniquely important investment, because “the purchase 23 of a home is usually the largest investment a person makes in his or her life.”⁴⁶
24 Many laws have been enacted to protect the security of the investment that a 25 person makes in a home.⁴⁷

26 The Subdivided Lands Act protects an owner's investment by regulating the 27 purchase transaction. A subdivider is required to demonstrate the ability to transfer 28 good title at the promised price, with the necessary infrastructure and promised

42. See 2003 Cal. Stat. ch. 557 (exemption from rulemaking procedures); 2004 Cal. Stat. ch. 356 (exemption from architectural decisionmaking procedure).

43. See 2003-2004 Annual Report, 33 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 569, 645-47 (2003); Common Interest Development Law: Architectural Review and Decisionmaking, 34 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 107 (2004).

44. Civ. Code § 1360.2 (operative January 1, 2012).

45. 2011 Cal. Stat. ch. 62.

46. Senate Floor Analysis of AB 452 (Aug. 22, 2001), p. 3.

47. See, e.g., Civ. Code § 1102 et seq., which require numerous specific informational disclosures to a prospective purchaser of residential property. The law does not require the same disclosures when selling nonresidential property.

1 amenities. Subdividers must also provide protection against blanket
2 encumbrances, and must provide prospective purchasers with detailed information
3 about the property to be purchased.

4 The Davis-Stirling Act protects an owner's investment by regulating the 5 association that manages and maintains the common area property. The financial 6 operations of the association are required to be transparent and democratic, so that 7 owners can monitor the financial condition of the development and take whatever
8 steps might be necessary to avoid loss of value. Owners are also protected against 9 the use of nonjudicial foreclosure to collect assessment delinquencies below a 10 specified threshold.

11 Residential Property is Typically the Owner's Home

12 In addition to being an important financial investment, residential property is 13 typically the owner's home. There is a strong public policy interest in protecting 14 the quality of living conditions within residential communities.

15 The Davis-Stirling Act achieves this purpose by regulating ongoing ownership
16 rights and responsibilities. It expressly protects certain important property use
17 rights, guarantees minimal due process when enforcing restrictions, requires fair
18 and open governance procedures, and provides a range of informal dispute 19 resolution mechanisms that can be used to resolve problems without recourse to 20 more adversarial and expensive processes. These regulatory provisions help to 21 provide a sound basis for amicable community self-governance.

22 The Subdivided Lands Act does less to protect living conditions, being almost 23 exclusively focused on the initial sales transaction. However, it does require that a 24 subdivider of a common interest development make reasonable arrangements, in 25 the governing declaration, on a wide range of self-governance issues. This helps to 26 ensure that the common interest development will maintain certain minimum 27 standards regarding the operation of its association.

28 Rationale for Regulation is Inapplicable to Nonresidential Property

29 Nonresidential subdivisions do not possess the attributes discussed above.

30 Nonresidential property is not the owner's home. Owners in a nonresidential 31 subdivision are not neighbors and may be expected to deal with one another at 32 arm's length. This eliminates any special public policy concern about maintaining 33 amicable living conditions within a residential community.

34 Nor is nonresidential property likely to be a uniquely important investment, of 35 the same magnitude as the investment that a person makes in a home. There is 36 therefore less of a compelling public policy need to regulate the sale and operation 37 of such property in order to protect the owner's investment.

38 Consequently, the rationale for regulation of residential property does not seem 39 applicable to nonresidential property. Furthermore, laws that have been tailored to

1 the needs of residential property owners⁴⁸ may not be suited to the needs of 2 nonresidential property owners and may unduly interfere with the transfer or 3 operation of nonresidential property.⁴⁹

4 Cost of Regulation

5 Compliance with the Subdivided Lands Act and the operational provisions of 6 the Davis-Stirling Act is not cost-free.

7 The Subdivided Lands Act requires the payment of fees, the purchase of bonds
8 or other securities, and the professional preparation of extensive reports. The 9 process also produces significant delay, which can increase debt service costs and 10 lead to opportunity costs.⁵⁰

11 The Davis-Stirling Act imposes ongoing management costs, through its 12 mandatory one-size-fits-all operational requirements.

13 The cost of regulation can be justified when imposed on a group that is 14 benefitted by the regulation. It is harder to justify when imposed on groups that do 15 not need or receive regulatory benefits.

16 PROBLEMS RELATING TO THE SCOPE OF THE 17 EXISTING EXEMPTIONS

18 The Commission has identified three concerns relating to the scope of the 19 existing exemption provisions:

48. The Commission believes that most reforms to the Davis-Stirling Act have been made to solve problems faced by residential property owners, without separate consideration of their effect on nonresidential property owners. For example, the legislative analyses of the most significant recent regulatory reforms of CID law make no mention of the bills' effects on nonresidential CIDs, instead expressly focusing on their effects on "homeowners." See, e.g., Senate Transportation and Housing Committee Analysis of SB 528 (Feb. 22, 2007) (open meetings), p. 1 ("A common-interest development (CID) is a form of real estate where each homeowner has an exclusive interest in a unit or lot and a shared or undivided interest in common area property.") (emphasis added); Senate Floor Analysis of SB 61 (Sept. 5, 2005), p. 7 (member elections) ("According to the author's office, ballots in CID elections are not required by law to be secret. This leaves an opening for potential abuse wherein homeowners can be intimidated and disinclined to vote in accordance with their true desires.") (emphasis added); Senate Floor Analysis of SB 137 (Sept. 7, 2005) (foreclosure limitations) ("This bill protects owners' equity in their homes...") (emphasis added); Assembly Floor Analysis of AB 1098 (Sept. 8, 2005), p. 2 (record inspection) ("The author identifies the purpose of the bill as preserving common interest developments as affordable housing by detailing the financial records that are subject to homeowner inspection.") (emphasis added). Moreover, CID reform bills are routinely referred to the Housing policy committees in the Legislature, without being heard by committees that consider proposed business regulations.

49. For example, the complex and costly record inspection procedures mandated by Civil Code Section 1365.2 can be justified as necessary to safeguard investments in residential property against mismanagement by volunteer association boards. However, the less burdensome requirements of Corporations Code Sections 8330 and 8333 are probably adequate for the governance of a business development or a development that is comprised of nonresidential amenities (e.g., a parking condominium).

50. See Commission Staff Memorandum 2012-33 (July 10, 2012).

- 1 (1) By their terms, the existing exemptions only apply to a subdivision that is 2 limited to “commercial” or “industrial” uses. As discussed below, there are 3 some subdivisions that are entirely nonresidential, but that permit uses that 4 are neither commercial nor industrial. Read strictly, the existing exemptions
5 do not apply to such subdivisions. Yet such an interpretation would seem to 6 conflict with the legislative intent to limit the application of the Subdivided
7 Lands Act and the operational provisions of the Davis-Stirling Act to 8 residential subdivisions.
- 9 (2) The existing exemptions apply to a subdivision that is limited to commercial 10 or industrial uses by “zoning.” As discussed below, there are laws other than 11 zoning laws that can restrict property to nonresidential uses. Read strictly, 12 the existing exemptions do not apply to a subdivision that is limited to 13 nonresidential uses by a law other than a zoning law. Again, however, such 14 an interpretation would seem to conflict with the legislative intent to limit
15 the Subdivided Lands Act and the operational provisions of the Davis-
16 Stirling Act to residential subdivisions.
- 17 (3) The existing exemptions apply to a subdivision that is limited to 18 “commercial” uses, but the term “commercial” is not defined. As discussed 19 below, there are some business subdivisions in which the operation of a 20 residential rental business is a permitted use. It is not clear that the business
21 of renting residences to third party tenants would be considered a 22 commercial use under the existing exemptions.

23 Those concerns are discussed more fully below.

24 Nonresidential Subdivision with Non-Commercial Uses

25 Some subdivisions are restricted to nonresidential uses, but permit uses that are 26 neither commercial nor industrial.⁵¹ For example, a subdivision might be 27 developed with separate parcels comprised of storage units, parking spaces, or 28 boat slips, to be sold to a purchaser for the purchaser’s own noncommercial use.⁵²
29 The lots in such subdivisions are used as personal amenities, rather than as 30 businesses or industrial operations.

31 Because such nonresidential subdivisions are not limited to commercial or 32 industrial uses, they do not fall within the letter of the existing exemption 33 provisions.

34 This is problematic because, as discussed above, the rationale for regulation of 35 residential property does not seem applicable to nonresidential property.

36 A storage unit or parking space is not the owner’s home and is unlikely to be the 37 owner’s most important economic investment. Thus, public policy concerns about 38 protecting the value and stability of personal residences and preserving amicable

51. See generally First Supplement to Commission Staff Memorandum 2011-29 (Aug. 3, 2011).

52. This discussion is not intended to address parking spaces, storage units, or other amenities that are appurtenant to residential property. Nor is it intended to address the operation of a parking lot, storage complex, or marina as a commercial enterprise, with the owner leasing space to customers.

1 living conditions within a residential community are not relevant to these
2 nonresidential subdivisions.

3 Moreover, general law governing property ownership and the governance of 4 voluntary associations⁵³ should be adequate to safeguard and regulate an owner’s
5 interest in a parking space, storage unit, or boat slip. It is not clear that the 6 imposition of an additional layer of operational regulation, tailored to the needs of 7 residential property owners, is necessary or beneficial for owners in these types of 8 nonresidential associations.

9 For the reasons discussed above, the Commission recommends that Business
10 and Professions Code Section 11010.3 and Civil Code Section 1373⁵⁴ be amended 11 to make clear that they apply to all nonresidential subdivisions, regardless of 12 type.⁵⁵

13 A “nonresidential subdivision” would be a subdivision in which residential use 14 is not permitted (by law or by a recorded declaration of covenants, conditions, and 15 restrictions).⁵⁶ However, “residential use” would not include specified incidental 16 or transitory uses (e.g., residential occupation by an on-site caretaker, or the short-17 term occupation of a boat).⁵⁷

18 Non-Zoning Restrictions on Property Use

19 The existing exemptions apply to a subdivision that is limited to commercial or 20 industrial uses by “zoning.” However, there are other sources of law that can 21 restrict or prohibit residential use of property. For example, the law restricts 22 residential use of property that is on the “border-zone” of hazardous
23 contamination.⁵⁸

24 There is no good policy reason for limiting the existing exemptions to 25 subdivisions that are restricted by zoning. The key policy consideration is the 26 effect of the restriction, not its form.

53. Typically, the governing association of a nonresidential subdivision would be regulated by the Nonprofit Mutual Benefit Corporation Law, which includes well-developed law on the conduct of meetings, elections, record-keeping, and other governance issues. See Corp. Code §§ 7110-8910.

54. On January 1, 2014, Civil Code Section 1373 will be repealed and continued as Civil Code Section 4202. See 2012 Cal. Stat. ch. 180. For that reason, the proposed law would amend Section 4202, rather than Section 1373.

55. This reform appears to be consistent with the long-standing practice of the Department of Real Estate, which reportedly does not require a public report for a subdivision that contains no residences (regardless of whether the permitted uses are “commercial” or “industrial”).

56. See proposed Bus. & Prof. Code § 11002; Civ. Code § 4203.

57. See proposed Bus. & Prof. Code § 11002(b)(2)-(3); Civ. Code § 4203(b)(2)-(3).

58. See, e.g., Health & Safety Code § 25232(b). See also Health & Safety Code § 25117.4 (“border-zone property” defined).

1 For that reason, the Commission recommends that the existing exemptions be
2 revised to make clear that they include a subdivision that is restricted to specified
3 uses by any law, not just a zoning law.⁵⁹

4 Residential Rental Business as “Commercial” Use

5 In some subdivisions that are restricted to commercial uses, a single parcel may 6 be further divided into separate apartments, which are then rented by the owner of 7 the parcel, as a business.

8 From the perspective of the property owner, this is plainly a commercial use of 9 the property. The owner’s primary reason for purchasing the property is to operate
10 a business. The owner is reasonably presumed to be more sophisticated and have 11 greater access to professional resources than a typical homeowner. Therefore, the 12 policy rationale for exempting commercial property from the Subdivided Lands
13 Act and the operational provisions of the Davis-Stirling Act appears to be fully 14 applicable to property that is used to operate a residential rental business.

15 While it is true that the Subdivided Lands Act and the operational provisions of 16 the Davis-Stirling Act are also intended to promote the quality of living conditions
17 within a subdivision, they do so only with respect to property owners. Neither
18 statute confers any meaningful benefit on an owner’s tenants. The Subdivided
19 Lands Act regulates the sales transaction between the subdivider and the purchaser 20 of a lot or parcel. It has no effect on the purchaser’s future tenants. Similarly, the 21 Davis-Stirling Act confers a host of rights and obligations on property owners, but 22 has almost no direct effect on an owner’s tenants.⁶⁰

23 For those reasons, the Commission recommends that the exemptions be revised 24 to make clear that the provision of rental apartments is a commercial use of 25 property, and therefore “nonresidential” for the purposes of the statutory 26 exemptions.⁶¹ This will avoid undue burdens on the property owners, without 27 affecting the rights that tenants possess under general landlord-tenant law.⁶²

59. See proposed Bus. & Prof. Code § 11002; Civ. Code § 4203.

60. There are only two provisions of the Davis-Stirling Act that confer a direct benefit on non-owner occupants of separate interest property, but neither of those provisions is included within the scope of the exemption provided by Civil Code Section 1373. They are therefore irrelevant in determining whether other provisions of the Davis-Stirling Act (which do not directly benefit tenants) should apply to a commercial development in which an owner operates an apartment building. See Civ. Code §§ 1361.5 (occupant guaranteed egress), 1364(d)(2) (warning to occupant before being relocated for termite abatement).

61. See proposed Bus. & Prof. Code § 11002(b)(1); Civ. Code § 4203(b)(1). Note that these provisions only apply to a lot that is divided into three or more separate apartments. This is intended to avoid the misapplication of the provisions to owner-occupied residences that have a single associated “in-law cottage” or “granny flat.”

62. See generally, M. Moskovitz, N. Lenvin, California Landlord-Tenant Practice, §§ 2.1-3.75, at 281-395 (Cal. Cont. Ed. Bar, 2d ed. 2011).

PROPOSED LEGISLATION

1 Bus. & Prof. Code § 11002 (added). “Residential subdivision” and “nonresidential
2 subdivision” defined

3 SECTION 1. Section 11002 is added to the Business and Professions Code, to 4 read:

5 11002. (a) For the purposes of this section, “residential subdivision” means a 6 subdivision in which residential use is permitted by both law and by any 7 declaration of covenants, conditions, and restrictions that is recorded in each
8 county in which the subdivision is located.

9 (b) For the purposes of subdivision (a), the following uses are not considered to 10 be residential uses and the fact that one or more of these uses is permitted within a
11 subdivision does not make the subdivision a “residential subdivision”:

12 (1) The operation of a residential rental business within a lot, parcel, or separate 13 interest, that contains three or more apartment units.

14 (2) The provision of living space to an agent or employee of a governing 15 association or a business that is located within the subdivision, as an incident of 16 agency or employment. For the purposes of this paragraph, “agent or employee”
17 includes, but is not limited to, a property manager, caretaker, or security guard.

18 (3) The short-term residential occupation of a boat, trailer, or motor vehicle that 19 is located on but not permanently affixed to a lot, parcel, or separate interest. For 20 the purposes of this paragraph “short-term occupation” means occupation for no
21 more than 60 days out of each calendar year.

22 (c) For the purposes of Section 11010.3, “nonresidential subdivision” means any 23 subdivision that is not a residential subdivision.

24 (d) For the purposes of this section, “separate interest” has the meaning provided
25 in Section 4185 of the Civil Code.

26 Comment. Section 11002 is new. Subdivision (a) defines “residential subdivision” for the 27 purposes of the section. Under the definition, if both the law and any recorded declaration of 28 covenants, conditions, and restrictions permit any residential use within a subdivision, the 29 subdivision is a “residential subdivision.”

30 Subdivision (b) states specific exceptions to the general rule provided in subdivision (a). The 31 fact that one or more of the uses listed in subdivision (b) is permitted within a subdivision is not 32 enough to make the subdivision a “residential subdivision.”

33 Subdivision (b)(3) establishes an exception for “short-term occupation,” which is defined as 60
34 days out of each calendar year. For a similar short-term occupation rule, see Section 51.3(d) (60
35 day per year exception to age restrictions on occupants of senior housing).

36 Under subdivision (c), any subdivision in which residential use is entirely precluded, by law or 37 by a recorded declaration of covenants, conditions, and restrictions, is a “nonresidential 38 subdivision.”

39 See also Section 11010.3 (exemption of nonresidential subdivision from provisions of this act).

1 Bus. & Prof. Code § 11010.3 (amended). Exemption of nonresidential subdivision

2 SEC. 2. Section 11010.3 of the Business and Professions Code is amended to 3 read:

4 11010.3. The provisions of this chapter shall not apply to the proposed sale or 5 lease of lots or other interests in a nonresidential subdivision ~~in which lots or other~~
6 ~~interests are (a) limited to industrial or commercial uses by zoning or (b) limited to~~ 7 ~~industrial or commercial uses by a declaration of covenants, conditions, and~~ 8 ~~restrictions, which declaration has been recorded in the official records of the~~ 9 ~~county or counties in which the subdivision is located.~~

10 Comment. Section 11010.3 is amended to make clear that the section applies to any 11 subdivision in which residential use is not permitted by law or by a recorded declaration of 12 covenants, conditions, and restrictions. See Section 11002(c) (“nonresidential subdivision” 13 defined).

14 Civ. Code § 4202 (amended). Nonresidential common interest development exemptions

15 SEC. 3. Section 4202 of the Civil Code is amended to read:

16 4202. (a) The following provisions do not apply to a nonresidential common 17 interest development ~~that is limited to industrial or commercial uses by zoning or~~ 18 ~~by a declaration of covenants, conditions, and restrictions that has been recorded~~ 19 ~~in the official records of each county in which the common interest development is~~ 20 ~~located:~~

21 (1) Section 4275.

22 (2) Article 5 (commencing with Section 4340) of Chapter 3.

23 (3) Article 2 (commencing with Section 4525), and Article 3 (commencing with 24 Section 4575), of Chapter 4.

25 (4) Section 4600.

26 (5) Section 4740.

27 (6) Section 4765.

28 (7) Sections 5300, 5305, 5565, and 5810, and paragraph (7) of subdivision (a) of 29 Section 5310.

30 (8) Sections 5500 through 5560, inclusive.

31 (9) Subdivision (b) of Section 5600.

32 (10) Subdivision (b) of Section 5605.

33 (b) The Legislature finds that the provisions listed in subdivision (a) are 34 appropriate to protect purchasers in residential common interest developments, 35 however, the provisions may not be necessary to protect purchasers in commercial 36 or industrial developments since the application of those provisions could result in 37 unnecessary burdens and costs for these types of developments.

38 Comment. Section 4202 is amended to make clear that the section applies to any common
39 interest development in which residential use is not permitted by law or by a recorded declaration
40 of covenants, conditions, and restrictions. See Section 4203(c) (“nonresidential common interest 41 development” defined).

1 Civ. Code § 4203 (added). “Residential common interest development” and “nonresidential
2 common interest development” defined

3 SEC. 4. Section 4203 is added to the Civil Code, to read:

4 4203. (a) For the purposes of this section, “residential common interest 5 development” means a common interest development in which residential use is 6 permitted by both law and by any declaration of covenants, conditions, and 7 restrictions that is recorded in each county in which the common interest
8 development is located.

9 (b) For the purposes of subdivision (a), the following uses are not considered to 10 be residential uses and the fact that one or more of these uses is permitted within a
11 common interest development does not make the common interest development a 12 “residential common interest development”:

13 (1) The operation of a residential rental business within a separate interest that 14 contains three or more apartment units.

15 (2) The provision of living space to an agent or employee of the association or a 16 business that is located within the common interest development, as an incident of 17 agency or employment. For the purposes of this paragraph, “agent or employee”
18 includes, but is not limited to, a property manager, caretaker, or security guard.

19 (3) The short-term residential occupation of a boat, trailer, or motor vehicle that 20 is located on but not permanently affixed to a separate interest. For the purposes of 21 this paragraph “short-term occupation” means occupation for no more than 60
22 days out of each calendar year.

23 (c) For the purposes of Section 4202, “nonresidential common interest 24 development” means any common interest development that is not a residential 25 common interest development.

26 Comment. Section 4203 is new. Subdivision (a) defines “residential common interest 27 development” for the purposes of the section. Under the definition, if both the law and any 28 recorded declaration of covenants, conditions, and restrictions permit any residential use within a 29 common interest development, the common interest development is a “residential common 30 interest development.”

31 Subdivision (b) states specific exceptions to the general rule provided in subdivision (a). The 32 fact that one or more of the uses listed in subdivision (b) is permitted within a common interest
33 development is not enough to make the common interest development a “residential common 34 interest development.”

35 Subdivision (b)(3) establishes an exception for “short-term occupation,” which is defined as 60
36 days out of each calendar year. For a similar short-term occupation rule, see Section 51.3(d) (60 37 day per year exception to age restrictions on occupants of senior housing).

38 Under subdivision (c), any common interest development in which residential use is entirely
39 precluded, by law or by a recorded declaration of covenants, conditions, and restrictions, is a
40 “nonresidential common interest development.”

41 See also Section 4202 (exemption of nonresidential common interest development from 42 specified provisions of this act).