

APPENDIX 4

REPORT OF THE
CALIFORNIA LAW REVISION COMMISSION
ON CHAPTER 168 OF THE STATUTES OF 2017
(ASSEMBLY BILL 905)

Recognition of Tribal and Foreign Court Money Judgments

Chapter 168 of the Statutes of 2017 was introduced as Assembly Bill 905, authored by Assembly Member Brian Maienschein. The measure implements the Commission's recommendation on Recognition of Tribal and Foreign Court Money Judgments, 44 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 611 (2016).

To reflect amendments made to Assembly Bill 905 in the legislative process, the Commission revised its Comments to Code of Civil Procedure Section 1716 and the heading of Chapter 3 (commencing with Section 1730) of Title 11 of Part 3 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and added a Comment to Code of Civil Procedure Section 1737.¹ Those revised Comments superseded the comparable Comments approved by the Commission when it approved its recommendation on Recognition of Tribal and Foreign Court Money Judgments.²

Ordinarily, the revised and added Comments would be published in an appendix to a Commission Annual Report. In this instance however, the revised and added Comments were erroneously incorporated into the published version of the recommendation itself.

Therefore, to preserve the historical record, the Comments originally approved by the Commission in conjunction with its recommendation on Recognition of Tribal and Foreign Court Money Judgments are reproduced below. The revised Comments that supersede the Comments set out below, as well as the added

1. See CLRC Staff Memorandum 2017-22, pp. 3-5 and attachment; Minutes of June 8, 2017, Commission Meeting.

2. For the originally approved Comments, see CLRC Staff Memorandum 2016-44; Minutes of September 22, 2016, Commission Meeting.

Comment to Code of Civil Procedure Section 1737, can be found in the Commission's published recommendation at 44 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 611 (2016), on pages 653, 669, and 672.

SUPERSEDED COMMENTS

Code Civ. Proc. § 1716 (amended). Standards for recognition [UFCMJRA § 4]

Comment. Section 1716 is similar to Section 4 of the Uniform Foreign-Country Money Judgments Recognition Act (2005) ("2005 Uniform Act").

Paragraphs (b)(1) and (c)(8) state exceptions to recognition of a foreign-country judgment related to the due process offered in the foreign proceeding. Under both paragraphs (b)(1) and (c)(8), the focus of the inquiry "is not whether the procedure in the rendering country is similar to U.S. procedure, but rather on the basic fairness of the foreign-country procedure." See Background from the 2005 Uniform Act infra. Unlike the Tribal Court Civil Money Judgment Act, this Act does not attempt to define "due process." Compare Code Civ. Proc. § 1732(c) with Code Civ. Proc. § 1714.

Paragraph (b)(2) provides that a foreign-country judgment shall not be recognized if the foreign court did not have personal jurisdiction over the defendant. Section 1717 makes clear that a foreign court lacks personal jurisdiction if either of the following applies:

- (1) The foreign court lacks a basis for exercising personal jurisdiction that would be sufficient according to the standards governing personal jurisdiction in this state.
- (2) The foreign court lacks personal jurisdiction under its own law.

Subdivision (c) lists grounds on which the court may decline to recognize a foreign-country judgment. With the exception of paragraphs (c)(3) and (c)(4), these grounds generally involve the fairness of the foreign proceeding. When the fairness-related grounds apply, the court has discretion to recognize the foreign-country judgment in the unusual case where countervailing considerations outweigh the seriousness of the defect underlying the applicable ground for nonrecognition. Such countervailing considerations could include, for instance, situations in which the opponent failed to raise an objection in the foreign court or the opponent's own misconduct was the primary cause of the harm suffered.

Paragraph (c)(1) provides that a court may decline to recognize a foreign-country judgment if the defendant did not receive notice of the foreign proceeding in sufficient time to enable the defendant to defend. Under this paragraph, a defect in either the timing or the content of the notice could be grounds for nonrecognition if that defect precluded the defendant from defending in the foreign court proceeding.

Paragraph (c)(2) provides that a court may decline to recognize a foreign-country judgment if fraud deprived the losing party of an adequate opportunity to present its case. The Uniform Law Commission's commentary on this provision indicates that the type of fraud that can serve as grounds for nonrecognition is limited to "extrinsic fraud — conduct of the prevailing party that deprived the losing party of an adequate opportunity to present its case." See Background from the 2005 Uniform Act infra. The reference to "extrinsic fraud" suggests that the test established by the exception is categorical, permitting nonrecognition in cases of extrinsic, but not intrinsic, fraud. However, the language of the exception establishes a functional test, whether the fraud deprived the party of an adequate opportunity to present its case. Recent judgment recognition case law evaluates fraud by assessing "whether the injured party had any opportunity to address the alleged misconduct during the original proceeding." See Restatement of the Law Fourth: The Foreign Relations Law of the United States: Jurisdiction § 404 Reporters' Note 3 (Tentative Draft No. 1, April 1, 2014). This case law suggests that a key consideration for a court deciding whether alleged fraud could be a ground for nonrecognition is whether there was "a reasonable opportunity for the person victimized by fraud to uncover the misconduct and bring it to the [rendering] court's attention." Id.

Paragraph (c)(4) provides that a court may decline to recognize a foreign-country judgment if it conflicts with another final and conclusive judgment. Some commentators suggest that, where the foreign court rendering the later judgment fairly considered the earlier judgment and declined to recognize it under standards similar to those set forth in this Uniform Act, a court should ordinarily recognize the later foreign-country judgment. However, in some situations, other law may require the recognition of one of the conflicting judgments (e.g., where one of the conflicting judgments is entitled to full faith and credit). See id. § 404 Comment f, Reporters' Note 6.

Former paragraph (c)(9) is not continued. Federal law includes specific standards governing the recognition of foreign-country defamation judgments. See subdivision (e) (referring to the federal SPEECH Act standards for recognition of defamation judgments).

Subdivision (e) is added to make clear that judgments that are not eligible for recognition under the federal SPEECH Act (codified at 28 U.S.C. §§ 4101-4105) shall not be recognized under this chapter.

The commentary for Section 4 of the 2005 Uniform Act is set out, in relevant part, below. The Law Revision Commission's recommendation (Recognition of Tribal and Foreign Court Money Judgments, 44 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 611 (2016)) does not reproduce all parts of the Uniform Law Commission's commentary. The omission of any part of the Uniform Law Commission's commentary does not necessarily imply disapproval of the omitted commentary.

Background from the 2005 Uniform Act

Source: This section is based on Section 4 of the 1962 [Uniform Foreign Money Judgments Recognition] Act [hereafter, "1962 Act"].

1. This Section provides the standards for recognition of a foreign-country money judgment. Section [1719] sets out the effect of recognition of a foreign-country money judgment under this Act.

2. Recognition of a judgment means that the forum court accepts the determination of legal rights and obligations made by the rendering court in the foreign country. See, e.g. Restatement (Second) of Conflicts of Laws, Ch. 5, Topic 3, Introductory Note (recognition of foreign judgment occurs to the extent the forum court gives the judgment "the same effect with respect to the parties, the subject matter of the action and the issues involved that it has in the state where it was rendered.") Recognition of a foreign-country judgment must be distinguished from enforcement of that judgment. Enforcement of the foreign-country judgment involves the application of the legal procedures of the state to ensure that the judgment debtor obeys the foreign-country judgment. Recognition of a foreign-country money judgment often is associated with enforcement of the judgment, as the judgment creditor usually seeks recognition of the foreign-country judgment primarily for the purpose of invoking the enforcement procedures of the forum state to assist the judgment creditor's collection of the judgment from the judgment debtor. Because the forum court cannot enforce the foreign-country judgment until it has determined that the judgment will be given effect, recognition is a prerequisite to enforcement of the foreign-country judgment. Recognition, however, also has significance outside the enforcement context because a foreign-country judgment also must be recognized before it can be given preclusive effect under res judicata and collateral estoppel principles. The issue of whether a foreign-country judgment will be recognized is distinct from both the issue of whether the judgment will be enforced, and the issue of the extent to which it will be given preclusive effect.

3. [Subdivision (a) of Section 1716] places an affirmative duty on the forum court to recognize a foreign-country money judgment unless one of the grounds for nonrecognition stated in [subdivision (b), (c), or (e)] applies. [Subdivision] (b) states three mandatory grounds for denying recognition to a foreign-country money judgment. If the forum court finds that one of the grounds listed in [subdivision] (b) exists, then it must deny recognition to the foreign-country money judgment. [Subdivision] (c) states eight nonmandatory grounds for denying recognition. The forum court has discretion to decide whether or not to refuse recognition based on one of these grounds. [Subdivision] (d) places the burden of proof on the party resisting recognition of the foreign-country judgment to establish that one of the grounds for nonrecognition [stated in subdivision (b) or (c)] exists.

4. The mandatory grounds for nonrecognition stated in [subdivision (b) of Section 1716] are identical to the mandatory grounds stated in Section 4 of the 1962 Act. The discretionary grounds stated in [paragraphs] (c)(1) through (6) are based on subsection 4(b)(1) through (6) of the 1962 Act. The discretionary grounds stated in [paragraphs] (c)(7) and (8) are new [to the 2005 Uniform Act].

5. Under [paragraph (b)(1) of Section 1716], the forum court must deny recognition to the foreign-country money judgment if that judgment was “rendered under a judicial system that does not provide impartial tribunals or procedures compatible with the requirements of due process of law.” The standard for this ground for nonrecognition “has been stated authoritatively by the Supreme Court of the United States in Hilton v. Guyot, 159 U.S.113, 205 (1895). As indicated in that decision, a mere difference in the procedural system is not a sufficient basis for nonrecognition. A case of serious injustice must be involved.” Cmt §4, Uniform Foreign Money-Judgment Recognition Act (1962). The focus of inquiry is not whether the procedure in the rendering country is similar to U.S. procedure, but rather on the basic fairness of the foreign-country procedure. Kam-Tech Systems, Ltd. v. Yardeni, 74 A.2d 644, 649 (N.J. App. 2001) (interpreting the comparable provision in the 1962 Act); accord, Society of Lloyd’s v. Ashenden, 233 F.3d 473 (7th Cir. 2000) (procedures need not meet all the intricacies of the complex concept of due process that has emerged from U.S. case law, but rather must be fair in the broader international sense) (interpreting comparable provision in the 1962 Act). Procedural differences, such as absence of jury trial or different evidentiary rules are not sufficient to justify denying recognition under [paragraph] (b)(1), so long as the essential elements of impartial administration and basic procedural fairness have been provided in the foreign proceeding. As the U.S. Supreme Court stated in Hilton:

Where there has been opportunity for a full and fair trial abroad before a court of competent jurisdiction conducting the trial upon regular proceedings, after due citation or voluntary appearance of the defendant, and under a system of jurisprudence likely to secure an impartial administration of justice between the citizens of its own country and those of other countries, and there is nothing to show either prejudice in the court, or in the system of laws under which it was sitting, or fraud in procuring the judgment, or any other special reason why the comity of this nation should not allow it full effect then a foreign-country judgment should be recognized. Hilton, 159 U.S. at 202.

6. [Omitted]

7. [Paragraph (c)(2) of Section 1716] limits the type of fraud that will serve as a ground for denying recognition to extrinsic fraud. This provision is consistent with the interpretation of the comparable provision in subsection 4(b)(2) of the 1962 Act by the courts, which have found that only extrinsic fraud — conduct of the prevailing party that deprived the losing party of an adequate opportunity to present its case — is sufficient under the 1962 Act. Examples of extrinsic fraud would be when the plaintiff deliberately had the initiating process served on the defendant at the wrong address, deliberately gave the defendant wrong information as to the time and place of the hearing, or obtained a default judgment against the defendant based on a forged confession of judgment. When this type of fraudulent action by the plaintiff deprives the defendant of an adequate opportunity to present its case, then it provides grounds for denying recognition of the foreign-country judgment. Extrinsic fraud should be distinguished from intrinsic fraud, such as false testimony of a witness or admission of a forged document into evidence during the foreign proceeding. Intrinsic fraud does not provide a basis for denying recognition under [paragraph] (c)(2), as the assertion that intrinsic fraud has occurred should be raised and dealt with in the rendering court.

8. The public policy exception in [paragraph (c)(3) of Section 1716] is based on the public policy exception in subsection 4(b)(3) of the 1962 Act, with one difference. The public policy exception in the 1962 Act states that the relevant inquiry is whether “the [cause of action] [claim for relief] on which the judgment is based” is repugnant to public policy. Based on this “cause of action” language, some courts interpreting the 1962 Act have refused to find that a public policy challenge based on something other than repugnancy of the foreign cause of action comes within this exception. E.g., Southwest Livestock & Trucking Co., Inc. v. Ramon, 169 F.3d 317 (5th Cir. 1999) (refusing to deny recognition to Mexican judgment on promissory note with interest rate of 48% because cause of action to collect on promissory note does not violate public policy); Guinness PLC v. Ward, 955 F.2d 875 (4th Cir. 1992) (challenge to recognition based on post-judgment settlement could not be asserted under public policy exception); The Society of Lloyd's v. Turner, 303 F.3d 325 (5th Cir. 2002) (rejecting argument legal standards applied to establish elements of breach of contract violated public policy because cause of action for breach of contract itself is not contrary to state public policy); cf. Bachchan v. India Abroad Publications, Inc., 585 N.Y.S.2d 661 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1992) (judgment creditor argued British libel judgment should be recognized despite argument it violated First Amendment because New York recognizes a cause of action for libel). [Paragraph] (c)(3) rejects this narrow focus by providing that the forum court may deny recognition if either the cause of action or the judgment itself violates public policy. Cf. Restatement (Third) of the Foreign Relations Law of the United States, § 482(2)(d) (1986) (containing a similarly-worded public policy exception to recognition).

Although [paragraph] (c)(3) of this Act rejects the narrow focus on the cause of action under the 1962 Act, it retains the stringent test for finding a public policy violation applied by courts interpreting the 1962 Act. Under that test, a difference in law, even a marked one, is not sufficient to raise a public policy issue. Nor is it relevant that the foreign law allows a recovery that the forum state would not allow. Public policy is violated only if recognition or enforcement of the foreign-country judgment would tend clearly to injure the public health, the public morals, or the public confidence in the administration of law, or would undermine “that sense of security for individual rights, whether of personal liberty or of private property, which any citizen ought to feel.” Hunt v. BP Exploration Co. (Libya) Ltd., 492 F. Supp. 885, 901 (N.D. Tex. 1980).

The language “or of the United States” in [paragraph] (c)(3), which does not appear in the 1962 Act provision, makes it clear that the relevant public policy is that of both the State in which recognition is sought and that of the United States. This is the position taken by the vast majority of cases interpreting the 1962 public policy provision. E.g., Bachchan v. India Abroad Publications, Inc., 585 N.Y.S.2d 661 (Sup.Ct. N.Y. 1992) (British libel judgment denied recognition because it violates First Amendment).

9. [Paragraph (c)(5) of Section 1716] allows the forum court to refuse recognition of a foreign-country judgment when the parties had a valid agreement, such as a valid forum selection clause or agreement to arbitrate, providing that the relevant dispute would be resolved in a forum other than the forum issuing the foreign-country judgment. Under this provision, the forum court must find both the existence of a valid agreement and that the agreement covered the subject matter involved in the foreign litigation resulting in the foreign-country judgment.

10. [Paragraph (c)(6) of Section 1716] authorizes the forum court to refuse recognition of a foreign-country judgment that was rendered in the foreign country solely on the basis of personal service when the forum court believes the original action should have been dismissed by the court in the foreign country on grounds of forum non conveniens.

11. [Paragraph (c)(7) of Section 1716] is new. Under this [paragraph], the forum court may deny recognition to a foreign-country judgment if there are circumstances that raise substantial doubt about the integrity of the rendering court with respect to that judgment. It requires a showing of corruption in the particular case that had an impact on the judgment that was rendered. This provision may be contrasted with [paragraph] (b)(1), which requires that the forum court refuse recognition to the foreign-country judgment if it was rendered under a judicial system that does not provide impartial tribunals. Like the comparable provision in subsection 4(a)(1) of the 1962 Act, [paragraph] (b)(1) focuses on the judicial system of the foreign country as a whole, rather than on whether the particular judicial proceeding leading to the foreign-country judgment was impartial and fair. See, e.g., The Society of Lloyd's v. Turner, 303 F.3d 325, 330 (5th Cir. 2002) (interpreting the 1962 Act); CIBC Mellon Trust Co. v. Mora Hotel Corp., N.V., 743 N.Y.S.2d 408, 415 (N.Y. App. 2002) (interpreting the 1962 Act); Society of Lloyd's v. Ashenden, 233 F.3d 473, 477 (7th Cir. 2000) (interpreting the 1962 Act). On the other hand, [paragraph] (c)(7) allows the court to deny recognition to the foreign-country judgment if it finds a lack of impartiality and fairness of the tribunal in the individual proceeding leading to the foreign-country judgment. Thus, the difference is that between showing, for example, that corruption and bribery is so prevalent throughout the judicial system of the foreign country as to make that entire judicial system one that does not provide impartial tribunals versus showing that bribery of the judge in the proceeding that resulted in the particular foreign-country judgment under consideration had a sufficient impact on the ultimate judgment as to call it into question.

12. [Paragraph (c)(8) of Section 1716] also is new. It allows the forum court to deny recognition to the foreign-country judgment if the court finds that the specific proceeding in the foreign court was not compatible with the requirements of fundamental fairness. Like [paragraph] (c)(7), it can be contrasted with [paragraph] (b)(1), which requires the forum court to deny recognition to the foreign-country judgment if the forum court finds that the entire judicial system in the foreign country where the foreign-country judgment was rendered does not provide procedures compatible with the requirements of fundamental fairness. While the focus of [paragraph] (b)(1) is on the foreign country's judicial system as a whole, the focus of [paragraph] (c)(8) is on the particular proceeding that resulted in the specific foreign-country judgment under consideration. Thus, the difference is that between showing, for example, that there has been such a breakdown of law and order in the particular foreign country that judgments are rendered on the basis of political decisions rather than the rule of law throughout the judicial system versus a showing that for political reasons the particular party against whom the foreign-country judgment was entered was denied fundamental fairness in the particular proceedings leading to the foreign-country judgment.

[Paragraphs (c)(7) and (8) of Section 1716] both are discretionary grounds for denying recognition, while [paragraph] (b)(1) is mandatory. Obviously, if the entire judicial system in the foreign country fails to satisfy the requirements of impartiality and fundamental fairness, a judgment rendered in that foreign country would be so compromised that the forum court should refuse to recognize it as a matter of course. On the other hand, if the problem is evidence of a lack of integrity or fundamental fairness with regard to the particular proceeding leading to the foreign-country judgment, then there may or may not be other factors in the particular case that would cause the forum court to decide to recognize the foreign-country judgment. For example, a forum court might decide not to exercise its discretion to deny recognition despite evidence of corruption or procedural unfairness in a particular case because the party resisting recognition failed to raise the issue on appeal from the foreign-country judgment in the foreign country, and the evidence establishes that, if the party had done so, appeal would have been an adequate mechanism for correcting the transgressions of the lower court.

13. Under [subdivision (d) of Section 1716], the party opposing recognition of the foreign-country judgment has the burden of establishing that one of the grounds for nonrecognition set out in [subdivision] (b) or (c) applies. The 1962 Act was silent as to who had the burden of proof to establish a ground for nonrecognition and courts applying the 1962 Act took different positions on the issue. Compare Bridgeway Corp. v. Citibank, 45 F.Supp. 2d 276, 285 (S.D.N.Y. 1999) (plaintiff has burden to show no mandatory basis under 4(a) for nonrecognition exists; defendant has burden regarding discretionary bases) with The Courage Co. LLC v. The ChemShare Corp., 93 S.W.3d 323, 331 (Tex. App. 2002) (party seeking to avoid recognition has burden to prove ground for nonrecognition). Because the grounds for nonrecognition in Section [1716] are in the nature of defenses to recognition, the burden of proof is most appropriately allocated to the party opposing recognition of the foreign-country judgment.

[Adapted from the Uniform Law Commission’s Comment to the 2005 Uniform Act § 4.]

Heading of Chapter 3 (commencing with Section 1730) (added).

Comment. The heading of Chapter 3 (commencing with Section 1730) is added to locate the Tribal Court Civil Money Judgment Act within Title 11.

The standards of recognition for tribal court civil money judgments set forth in Section 1737 of this Act are derived from Section 4 of the Uniform Foreign-Country Money Judgments Recognition Act (2005) (hereafter, “2005 Uniform Act”). See also Section 1716.

Paragraph (b)(1) of Section 1737 provides that a tribal court money judgment shall not be recognized if the tribal court did not have personal jurisdiction over the respondent. Under this paragraph, a tribal court can lack personal jurisdiction if either of the following applies:

- (1) The tribal court lacks a basis for exercising personal jurisdiction that would be sufficient according to the standards governing personal jurisdiction in this state.
- (2) The tribal court lacks personal jurisdiction under its own law.

The need to evaluate personal jurisdiction under the tribal court’s own law should be rare. In most cases, objections to personal jurisdiction will have been litigated or waived in the tribal court proceeding. “There is authority ... for the proposition that a U.S. court generally will not look behind a foreign court’s finding of personal jurisdiction under its own law.” See Restatement of the Law Fourth: The Foreign Relations Law of the United States: Jurisdiction § 403 Reporters’ Note 7 (Tentative Draft No. 1, April 1, 2014). Generally, the mere fact that a judgment was rendered by a tribal court suggests that personal jurisdiction was proper under tribal law. However, a California court may need to evaluate personal jurisdiction under tribal law when the issue of personal jurisdiction was neither litigated nor waived in the tribal court proceeding (e.g., the defendant never appeared and a default judgment was entered).

Where a defect in the service of process would defeat personal jurisdiction under tribal law, a court may find that the tribal court lacked personal jurisdiction under tribal law on the basis of that service defect. However, where the service defect is not jurisdictional, the service defect could still lead to nonrecognition under other provisions. E.g., Section 1737(c)(1).

Subdivision (c) of Section 1737 lists grounds on which the court may decline to recognize a tribal court money judgment. With the exception of paragraphs (c)(3) and (c)(4) of Section 1737, these grounds generally involve the fairness of the tribal court proceeding. When the fairness-related grounds apply, the court has discretion to recognize the tribal court judgment in the unusual case where countervailing considerations outweigh the seriousness of the defect underlying the applicable ground for nonrecognition. Such countervailing considerations could include, for instance, situations in which the opponent failed to raise an objection in the tribal court or the opponent's own misconduct was the primary cause of the harm suffered.

Section 1737(c)(1) provides that a court may decline to recognize a tribal court money judgment if the defendant did not receive notice of the tribal court proceeding in sufficient time to enable the defendant to defend. Under this paragraph, a defect in either the timing or the content of the notice could be grounds for nonrecognition if that defect precluded the defendant from defending in the tribal court proceeding.

Section 1737(c)(2) provides that a court may decline to recognize a tribal court money judgment if fraud deprived the losing party of an adequate opportunity to present its case. The Uniform Law Commission's commentary on this provision indicates that the type of fraud that can serve as grounds for nonrecognition is limited to "extrinsic fraud — conduct of the prevailing party that deprived the losing party of an adequate opportunity to present its case." See Background from the 2005 Uniform Act infra. The reference to "extrinsic fraud" suggests that the test established by the exception is categorical, permitting nonrecognition in cases of extrinsic, but not intrinsic, fraud. However, the language of the exception establishes a functional test, whether the fraud deprived the party of an adequate opportunity to present its case. Recent judgment recognition case law evaluates fraud by assessing "whether the injured party had any opportunity to address the alleged misconduct during the original proceeding." See Restatement of the Law Fourth: The Foreign Relations Law of the United States: Jurisdiction §

404 Reporters' Note 3 (Tentative Draft No. 1, April 1, 2014). This case law suggests that a key consideration for a court deciding whether alleged fraud could be a ground for nonrecognition is whether there was "a reasonable opportunity for the person victimized by fraud to uncover the misconduct and bring it to the [rendering] court's attention." Id.

Section 1737(c)(4) provides that a court may decline to recognize a tribal court money judgment if it conflicts with another final and conclusive judgment. Some commentators suggest that, where the tribal court rendering the later judgment fairly considered the earlier judgment and declined to recognize it under standards similar to those set forth in this Act, a court should ordinarily recognize the later tribal court money judgment. However, in some situations, other law may require the recognition of one of the conflicting judgments (e.g., where one of the conflicting judgments is entitled to full faith and credit). See id. § 404 Comment f, Reporters' Note 6.

The commentary for Section 4 of the 2005 Uniform Act is set out, in relevant part, below. The Law Revision Commission's recommendation (Recognition of Tribal and Foreign Court Money Judgments, 44 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 611 (2016)) does not reproduce all parts of the Uniform Law Commission's commentary. Background from the 2005 Uniform Act

Source: [Section 1737] is based on Section 4 of the 1962 [Uniform Foreign Money Judgments Recognition] Act [hereafter, "1962 Act"].

1. [Section 1737] provides the standards for recognition of a [tribal court] money judgment. ...

2. [Omitted]

3. ... [Subdivision (b) of Section 1737] states three mandatory grounds for denying recognition to a [tribal court] money judgment. If the forum court finds that one of the grounds listed in [subdivision (b) of Section 1737] exists, then it must deny recognition to the [tribal court] money judgment. [Subdivision (c) of Section 1737] states [nine] nonmandatory grounds for denying recognition. The forum court has discretion to decide whether or not to refuse recognition based on one of these grounds. [Subdivision (d) of Section 1737] places the burden of proof on the party resisting recognition of the [tribal court] judgment to establish that one of the grounds for nonrecognition exists.

4. [Omitted]

5. Under [paragraph (b)(3) of Section 1737], the forum court must deny recognition to the [tribal court] money judgment if that judgment was "rendered under a judicial system that does not provide impartial tribunals or procedures compatible with the requirements of due process of law.” The standard for this ground for nonrecognition “has been stated authoritatively by the Supreme Court of the United States in Hilton v. Guyot, 159 U.S.113, 205 (1895). As indicated in that decision, a mere difference in the procedural system is not a sufficient basis for nonrecognition. A case of serious injustice must be involved.” Cmt §4, Uniform Foreign Money-Judgment Recognition Act (1962). The focus of inquiry is not whether the procedure ... is similar to U.S. procedure, but rather on the basic fairness of the [tribal court] procedure. Kam-Tech Systems, Ltd. v. Yardeni, 74 A.2d 644, 649 (N.J. App. 2001) (interpreting the comparable provision in the 1962 Act); accord, Society of Lloyd’s v. Ashenden, 233 F.3d 473 (7th Cir. 2000) (procedures need not meet all the intricacies of the complex concept of due process that has emerged from U.S. case law, but rather must be fair in the broader international sense) (interpreting comparable provision in the 1962 Act). Procedural differences, such as absence of jury trial or different evidentiary rules are not sufficient to justify denying recognition under [paragraph (b)(3) of Section 1737], so long as the essential elements of impartial administration and basic procedural fairness have been provided in the [tribal court] proceeding. As the U.S. Supreme Court stated in Hilton:

Where there has been opportunity for a full and fair trial abroad before a court of competent jurisdiction conducting the trial upon regular proceedings, after due citation or voluntary appearance of the defendant, and under a system of jurisprudence likely to secure an impartial administration of justice between the citizens of its own country and those of other countries, and there is nothing to show either prejudice in the court, or in the system of laws under which it was sitting, or fraud in procuring the judgment, or any other special reason why the comity of this nation should not allow it full effect then a foreign-country judgment should be recognized. Hilton, 159 U.S. at 202.

6. [Omitted]

7. [Paragraph (c)(2) of Section 1737] limits the type of fraud that will serve as a ground for denying recognition to extrinsic fraud. This provision is consistent with the interpretation of the comparable provision in subsection 4(b)(2) of the 1962 Act by the courts, which have found that only extrinsic fraud — conduct of the prevailing party that deprived the losing party of an adequate opportunity to present its case — is sufficient under the 1962 Act. Examples of extrinsic fraud would be when the plaintiff deliberately had the initiating process served on the defendant at the wrong address, deliberately gave the defendant wrong information as to the time and place of the hearing, or obtained a default judgment against the defendant based on a forged confession of judgment. When this type of fraudulent action by the plaintiff deprives the defendant of an adequate opportunity to present its case, then it provides grounds for denying recognition of the [tribal court] judgment. Extrinsic fraud should be distinguished from intrinsic fraud, such as false testimony of a witness or admission of a forged document into evidence during the [tribal court] proceeding. Intrinsic fraud does not provide a basis for denying recognition under [paragraph (c)(2) of Section 1737], as the assertion that intrinsic fraud has occurred should be raised and dealt with in the rendering court.

8. The public policy exception in [paragraph (c)(3) of Section 1737] is based on the public policy exception in subsection 4(b)(3) of the 1962 Act, with one difference. The public policy exception in the 1962 Act states that the relevant inquiry is whether “the [cause of action] [claim for relief] on which the judgment is based” is repugnant to public policy. Based on this “cause of action” language, some courts interpreting the 1962 Act have refused to find that a public policy challenge based on something other than repugnancy of the ... cause of action comes within this exception. E.g., Southwest Livestock & Trucking Co., Inc. v. Ramon, 169 F.3d 317 (5th Cir. 1999) (refusing to deny recognition to Mexican judgment on promissory note with interest rate of 48% because cause of action to collect on promissory note does not violate public policy); Guinness PLC v. Ward, 955 F.2d 875 (4th Cir. 1992) (challenge to recognition based on post-judgment settlement could not be asserted under public policy exception); The Society of Lloyd’s v. Turner, 303 F.3d 325 (5th Cir. 2002) (rejecting argument legal standards applied to establish elements of breach of contract violated public policy because cause of action for breach of contract itself is not contrary to state public policy); cf. Bachchan v. India Abroad Publications, Inc., 585 N.Y.S.2d 661 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1992) (judgment creditor argued British libel judgment should be recognized despite argument it violated First Amendment because New York recognizes a cause of action for libel). [Paragraph (c)(3) of Section 1737] rejects this narrow focus by providing that the forum court may deny recognition if either the cause of action or the judgment itself violates public policy. Cf. Restatement (Third) of the Foreign Relations Law of the United States, § 482(2)(d) (1986) (containing a similarly-worded public policy exception to recognition).

Although [paragraph (c)(3) of Section 1737] of this Act rejects the narrow focus on the cause of action under the 1962 Act, it retains the stringent test for finding a public policy violation applied by courts interpreting the 1962 Act. Under that test, a difference in law, even a marked one, is not sufficient to raise a public policy issue. Nor is it relevant that the [tribe's] law allows a recovery that the forum state would not allow. Public policy is violated only if recognition or enforcement of the [tribal court] judgment would tend clearly to injure the public health, the public morals, or the public confidence in the administration of law, or would undermine "that sense of security for individual rights, whether of personal liberty or of private property, which any citizen ought to feel." Hunt v. BP Exploration Co. (Libya) Ltd., 492 F. Supp. 885, 901 (N.D. Tex. 1980).

The language "or of the United States" in [paragraph (c)(3) of Section 1737], which does not appear in the 1962 Act provision, makes it clear that the relevant public policy is that of both the State in which recognition is sought and that of the United States. This is the position taken by the vast majority of cases interpreting the 1962 public policy provision. E.g., Bachchan v. India Abroad Publications, Inc., 585 N.Y.S.2d 661 (Sup.Ct. N.Y. 1992) (British libel judgment denied recognition because it violates First Amendment).

9. [Paragraph (c)(5) of Section 1737] allows the forum court to refuse recognition of a [tribal court] judgment when the parties had a valid agreement, such as a valid forum selection clause or agreement to arbitrate, providing that the relevant dispute would be resolved in a forum other than the [tribal court] issuing the ... judgment. Under this provision, the forum court must find both the existence of a valid agreement and that the agreement covered the subject matter involved in the ... litigation resulting in the [tribal court] judgment.

10. [Paragraph (c)(6) of Section 1737] authorizes the forum court to refuse recognition of a [tribal court] judgment that was rendered ... solely on the basis of personal service when the forum court believes the original action should have been dismissed by the [tribal] court ... on grounds of forum non conveniens.

11. ... Under [paragraph (c)(7) of Section 1737], the forum court may deny recognition to a [tribal court] judgment if there are circumstances that raise substantial doubt about the integrity of the rendering court with respect to that judgment. It requires a showing of corruption in the particular case that had an impact on the judgment that was rendered. This provision may be contrasted with [paragraph (b)(3) of Section 1737], which requires that the forum court refuse recognition to the [tribal court] judgment if it was rendered under a judicial system that does not provide impartial tribunals. Like the comparable provision in subsection 4(a)(1) of the 1962 Act, [paragraph (b)(3) of Section 1737] focuses on the [tribe's] judicial system ... as a whole, rather than on whether the particular judicial proceeding leading to the [tribal court] judgment was impartial and fair. See, e.g., The Society of Lloyd's v. Turner, 303 F.3d 325, 330 (5th Cir. 2002) (interpreting the 1962 Act); CIBC Mellon Trust Co. v. Mora Hotel Corp., N.V., 743 N.Y.S.2d 408, 415 (N.Y. App. 2002) (interpreting the 1962 Act); Society of Lloyd's v. Ashenden, 233 F.3d 473, 477 (7th Cir. 2000) (interpreting the 1962 Act). On the other hand, [paragraph (c)(7) of Section 1737] allows the court to deny recognition to the [tribal court] judgment if it finds a lack of impartiality and fairness of the tribunal in the individual proceeding leading to the [tribal court] judgment. Thus, the difference is that between showing, for example, that corruption and bribery is so prevalent throughout the [tribe's] judicial system ... as to make that entire judicial system one that does not provide impartial tribunals versus showing that bribery of the judge in the proceeding that resulted in the particular [tribal court] judgment under consideration had a sufficient impact on the ultimate judgment as to call it into question.

12. [Paragraph (c)(8) of Section 1737] ... allows the forum court to deny recognition to the [tribal court] judgment if the court finds that the specific proceeding in the [tribal] court was not compatible with the requirements of fundamental fairness. Like [paragraph (c)(7) of Section 1737], it can be contrasted with [paragraph (b)(3) of Section 1737], which requires the forum court to deny recognition to the [tribal court] judgment if the forum court finds that the entire judicial system ... where the [tribal court] judgment was rendered does not provide procedures compatible with the requirements of fundamental fairness. While the focus of [paragraph (b)(3) of Section 1737] is on the [tribal] judicial system as a whole, the focus of [paragraph (c)(8) of Section 1737] is on the particular proceeding that resulted in the specific [tribal court] judgment under consideration. Thus, the difference is that between showing, for example, that there has been such a breakdown of law and order in the particular [tribe] that judgments are rendered on the basis of political decisions rather than the rule of law throughout the judicial system versus a showing that for political reasons the particular party against whom the [tribal court] judgment was entered was denied fundamental fairness in the particular proceedings leading to the [tribal court] judgment.

[Paragraphs (c)(7) and (8) of Section 1737] both are discretionary grounds for denying recognition, while [paragraph (b)(3) of Section 1737] is mandatory. Obviously, if the [tribe's] entire judicial system ... fails to satisfy the requirements of impartiality and fundamental fairness, a judgment rendered in that [judicial system] would be so compromised that the forum court should refuse to recognize it as a matter of course. On the other hand, if the problem is evidence of a lack of integrity or fundamental fairness with regard to the particular proceeding leading to the [tribal court] judgment, then there may or may not be other factors in the particular case that would cause the forum court to decide to recognize the [tribal court] judgment. For example, a forum court might decide not to exercise its discretion to deny recognition despite evidence of corruption or procedural unfairness in a particular case because the party resisting recognition failed to raise the issue on appeal from the [tribal court] judgment ..., and the evidence establishes that, if the party had done so, appeal would have been an adequate mechanism for correcting the transgressions of the lower court.
