Time Within Which Motion for New Trial May Be Made

November 1958

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL

To HIS EXCELLENCY GOODWIN J. KNIGHT
Governor of California and to the Members of the Legislature

The California Law Revision Commission was authorized by Resolution Chapter 42 of the Statutes of 1956 to make a study to determine whether the law relating to motions for new trial in cases where notice of entry of judgment has not been given should be revised. The Commission submits herewith its recommendation relating to this subject and the study prepared by its research consultant, Professor Harold G. Pickering of the Hastings College of Law.

1. The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that proper record-keeping is essential for the integrity of the financial system and for the ability to detect and prevent fraud.

2. The second part of the document outlines the various methods used to collect and analyze data. It describes the use of statistical techniques to identify trends and patterns in the data, and the importance of using reliable sources of information.

3. The third part of the document discusses the role of the government in regulating the financial system. It highlights the need for strong regulatory frameworks to ensure the stability and soundness of the financial system, and the importance of monitoring and enforcing these regulations.

4. The fourth part of the document discusses the impact of financial crises on the economy. It notes that financial crises can have severe and long-lasting effects on the economy, and that it is important to have mechanisms in place to prevent and mitigate such crises.

5. The fifth part of the document discusses the role of international organizations in promoting financial stability. It notes that these organizations play a crucial role in providing technical assistance and support to developing countries, and in promoting global financial stability.

RECOMMENDATION OF THE CALIFORNIA LAW REVISION COMMISSION

Relating to Time Within Which Motions for New Trial and To Vacate Judgment May Be Made

Section 659 of the Code of Civil Procedure authorizes a notice of intention to move for a new trial to be filed, inter alia, "within ten (10) days after receiving written notice of the entry of the judgment." Section 663a of the code authorizes a notice of intention to move to set aside and vacate a judgment or decree based upon findings of fact made by the court or the special verdict of a jury to be filed "within ten days after notice of the entry of judgment." Under both of these sections a motion is timely even though made many months or years after judgment has been entered and the time within which an appeal may be taken has passed, if the moving party can show that he was not given written notice of entry of the judgment by the prevailing party. It has been held that notice received from the clerk of the court is not sufficient to start the moving party's time running under Section 659; the same is presumably true under Section 663a.

The Commission believes that this situation is undesirable. The orderly administration of justice requires that motions for new trial and to set aside and vacate judgments be made and disposed of within a reasonably short time after a case is decided. While the party against whom the motion is made can be said to have brought the difficulty on himself by failing to give notice of entry of judgment, the State has a larger interest in the matter than that of assessing the blame for long-delayed motions between the parties or their counsel.

The Commission recommends, therefore, that Sections 659 and 663a of the Code of Civil Procedure be revised to require the motions to which they relate to be made within 30 days after entry of judgment or within 10 days after receipt of written notice of entry of judgment, whichever is earlier. Under this rule the prevailing party will be able, as at the present time, to shorten the time to move for a new trial or to vacate a judgment by giving prompt notice of the entry of judgment. Should he fail to give such notice the time to move will expire 30 days after the entry of judgment.

The Commission does not believe that these proposed amendments will impose undue hardship on the moving party. As the report of its research consultant shows, at least 12 jurisdictions have a similar rule with respect to motions for new trial and most of them give the moving party only 10 days or less after entry of judgment (or other event of record) to make the motion. Moreover, the losing party must keep track of the date of entry of judgment in any event inasmuch as his time to appeal runs from that date.

The Commission also recommends that Section 953d of the Code of Civil Procedure, which provides that a notice of entry of judgment required by Section 659 must be given in writing unless written notice be waived in writing or by oral stipulation made in open court, be amended to make it applicable also to notices of entry of judgment required by Section 663a. The desirability of this amendment was suggested by the State Bar in connection with its review of the Commission's recommendation and study on this subject.

The Commission's recommendation would be effectuated by the enactment of the following measure:*

An act to amend Sections 659, 663a and 953d of the Code of Civil Procedure, relating to notice of intention to move for a new trial and notice of intention to move to set aside and vacate certain judgments and decrees.

The people of the State of California do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. Section 659 of the Code of Civil Procedure is amended to read:

659. ~~Notice of Motion. Filing and Service. Time. Contents. Extension of Time.~~ The party intending to move for a new trial must, either (1) before the entry of judgment and, where a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict is pending, then within five (5) days after the making of said motion, or (2) within ten (10) days after receiving written notice of the entry of the judgment, file with the clerk and serve upon the adverse party a notice of his intention to move for a new trial, designating the grounds upon which the motion will be made and whether the same will be made upon affidavits or the minutes of the court or both, either

1. Before the entry of judgment and, where a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict is pending, then within five days after the making of said motion; or

2. Within thirty days after the entry of the judgment or ten days after receiving from any party written notice of the entry of judgment, whichever is earlier.

Said notice shall be deemed to be a motion for a new trial on all the grounds stated in the notice. The time above specified shall not be extended by order or stipulation.

SEC. 2. Section 663a of the Code of Civil Procedure is amended to read:

663a. The party intending to make the motion mentioned in the last section must, within thirty days after the entry of judgment or

* Matter in italics would be added to the present law; matter in "strikeout" type would be omitted from the present law.

within ten days after receiving from any party written notice of the entry of judgment, whichever is earlier, serve upon the adverse party and file with the clerk of the court a notice of his intention, designating the grounds upon which, and the time at which the motion will be made, and specifying the particulars in which the conclusions of law are not consistent with the finding of facts, or in which the judgment or decree is not consistent with the special verdict. The time designated for the making of the motion must not be more than sixty days from the time of the service of the notice. An order of the court granting such motion may be reviewed on appeal in the same manner as a special order made after final judgment and a bill of exceptions to be used on such appeal may be prepared as provided in ~~section six hundred and forty-nine.~~ Section 649.

SEC. 3. Section 953d of the Code of Civil Procedure is amended to read:

953d. Any notice of entry of judgment required by the provisions of Sections 659 or 663a of this code, must be given in writing, unless written notice thereof be waived in writing or by oral stipulation made in open court and entered in the minutes.

A STUDY RELATING TO THE TIME WITHIN WHICH A MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL MAY BE MADE WHEN NOTICE OF ENTRY OF JUDGMENT HAS NOT BEEN GIVEN *

Theoretically the law favors a speedy end to litigation. Actually it all too frequently fails to achieve this goal. One obstacle to its achievement in California is Section 659 of the Code of Civil Procedure which, in effect, leaves without limit the time within which a party may move for a new trial in some cases. That section provides in relevant part:

659. Notice of Motion: Filing and Service, Time: Contents: Extension of Time. The party intending to move for a new trial must, either (1) before the entry of judgment and, where a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict is pending, then within five (5) days after the making of said motion, or (2) within ten (10) days after receiving written notice of the entry of the judgment, file with the clerk and serve upon the adverse party a notice of his intention to move for a new trial. . . .

Provision (1) may be disregarded because if the notice of intention to move for a new trial is served prior to the entry of judgment no problem of delay is involved. However, when notice is not served prior to judgment, provision (2) becomes operative and the moving party has ten days "after receiving written notice of the entry of the judgment" in which to file and serve his notice of intention to move for a new trial. In cases in which notice of entry of judgment is not received the time allowed to move for a new trial is thus made indefinite and indeterminate and may extend long after the right to appeal from the judgment has expired.

Thus, in Smith v. Halstead,¹ the defendant served a notice of intention to move for a new trial three years and seven months after the entry of judgment. There being nothing in the record to show that notice of entry of judgment had been "received" by him the court held the motion timely.² In fact, defendant's time to move would have run on indefinitely until he received such notice.³

* This study was made at the direction of the Law Revision Commission by Professor Harold G. Pickering of the Hastings College of Law.

² It might be noted that, while under Section 659 the time begins to run on the date of receiving written notice of the entry of the judgment, the District Court of Appeal stated in Smith v. Halstead that the time does not begin to run until proof of service of notice of entry is filed.

³ Cowee v. Marsh, 50 Adv. Cal. 168, 324 P.2d 553 (1958); Peoples F. & T. Co. v. Phoenix Assur. Co., 104 Cal. App. 334, 285 Pac. 857 (1930); Steward v. Spano, 82 Cal. App. 306, 255 Pac. 532 (1927); Bates v. Ransome-Crummey Co., 42 Cal. App. 699, 184 Pac. 89 (1919); Jansson v. National Steamship Co., 34 Cal. App. 483, 168 Pac. 151 (1917).

Section 659 is open to the further objection that the issue as to whether a party's motion for a new trial is timely is subject to a possible conflict of extrinsic evidence as to whether the moving party received notice of entry of judgment.⁴

Should Section 659 be revised to preclude the possibility of such long-delayed motions for new trial? Before turning to this question a brief analysis of the legislative history of Section 659 and of the law of other jurisdictions relating to the time for making motions for new trials will be presented for such light as they may shed on the question.

LEGISLATIVE HISTORY OF SECTION 659 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE

A review of the legislative history of Section 659 of the Code of Civil Procedure must include consideration also of the legislative history of Section 660.

Beginning with the original 1872 Code of Civil Procedure the underlying legislative intent appears to have been to expedite the making and disposition of motions for new trial. The 1872 version of Section 659 required that notice of intention to move for new trial be filed and served within 30 days after "decision or verdict" and that it fix a time and place for hearing the motion not less than 10 or more than 20 days after service.⁵ Section 660, enacted in the same year, limited adjournment by the court of the hearing of a motion for new trial to 10 days and required that the motion be decided within 10 days after hearing.⁶ Thus events of record were fixed as the events from which the time for making the motion was to be computed and a policy of expeditious disposition of the motion was established.

In 1873-74 Section 659 was amended to reduce the time for serving a notice of intention to move for new trial from 30 to 10 days and Section 660 was amended to require that the motion "shall be heard at the earliest practicable period."⁷ This bespoke a continued desire for speed in handling such motions but was flexible indeed as compared with the stringent provisions of the two sections as they stood in 1872. However, a discrimination was introduced between jury and nonjury cases. In jury cases the time for serving the notice was to be computed from the date of the verdict, as before, but in nonjury cases it was made to run from "notice of the decision of the Court or referee." Thus the notion of starting the time to run from the time of notice of an event in the litigation rather than the event itself was introduced in nonjury cases. Furthermore, an additional element of uncertainty ⁴If the evidence bearing on whether notice was received does not appear in the record the issue must be tried as on any other motion. When an issue of fact is raised on a motion it may be tried on affidavits, CAL. CODE CIV. PROC. § 2009, and usually is. Fuller v. Lindenbaum, 29 Cal. App.2d 227, 84 P.2d 155 (1938). The court may also receive oral testimony. Perez v. Perez, 111 Cal. App.2d 827, 245 P.2d 344 (1952). In Dept. of Social Welfare v. Gandy, 56 Cal. App.2d 209, 132 P.2d 241 (1942), an appeal from an order granting a new trial, the issue on the hearing of the motion was the date on which a notice of entry of judgment served by mail had been received by the plaintiff. The issue was resolved on consideration of affidavits submitted by the plaintiff on the hearing of the motion as against an affidavit of mailing of notice of entry filed three days after entry of the judgment. The order was reversed on the ground that the evidence established receipt of the notice of entry more than ten days prior to the motion for a new trial.

was introduced in that there was no provision for service of the "notice of the decision" referred to.⁸

Although the 1900-01 revision of the Code of Civil Procedure⁹ was abortive, having been declared unconstitutional on technical grounds,¹⁰ it is worth noting that it amended Section 659 to fix the time for serving and filing the notice of intention to move for new trial as "within ten days after receiving notice of the entry of the judgment" in both jury and nonjury cases.¹¹ The only comment respecting Section 659 in the Report of the Commissioners for the Revision and Reform of the Law, Recommendations Respecting the Code of Civil Procedure on the 1900-01 revision is the following:

This fixes the notice of the entry of a judgment as the period from which to compute the time for moving for a new trial, . . .¹²

No relevant change was made by the 1900-01 revision in Section 660.¹³ Since the requirement that the motion be heard "at the earliest practicable period" was retained it would appear that the possibility of indefinite delay arising out of the provision that the time should run from "receiving notice of the entry of the judgment" was not visualized by the Commissioners or the Legislature.

In 1907 the ill-fated 1901 revision of these sections was re-enacted with some changes.¹⁴ Section 659 was revised as it had been in 1901; thus was enacted for the first time the provision that in both jury and nonjury cases the time in which to serve notice of intention to move for a new trial begins to run "within ten days after receiving notice of the entry of the judgment."¹⁵

In 1915 Section 659 was amended to revive the discrimination between jury and nonjury cases by providing for serving and filing the notice of intention "within ten days after verdict" for jury cases; the requirement in nonjury cases at "ten days after receiving notice of the entry of the judgment"¹⁶ was unchanged. However, expedition in the disposition of motions for new trial received added emphasis in that legislative year in two respects:

⁸The 1873-74 amendments also amended Section 659 to provide that a motion for new trial could be made on (1) affidavits served 10 days after the notice, (2) a bill of exceptions settled within 10 days after the notice, (3) a statement of the case served within 10 days after the notice, but with elaborate provisions for its ultimate settlement or (4) the minutes of the court. The adverse party had 10 days in each instance in which to serve opposing documents. The time of the moving party could be enlarged by the court. Cal. Amend. Code 1873-74, §§ 85, 86, pp. 315, 317.

⁹Cal. Stat. 1900-01, c. CII, p. 117.

¹⁰Lewis v. Dunne, 134 Cal. 291, 66 Pac. 478 (1901).

¹¹Cal. Stat. 1900-01, c. CII, § 123, p. 149. Section 659 was also amended to eliminate the "statement of the case" as an alternative record upon which to present the motion and, of course, the elaborate procedure for its settlement. This was restored in the 1907 act but eventually was dropped along with the bill of exceptions.

¹²1 APP. TO JOURNALS OF SENATE AND ASSEMBLY, doc. 12, p. 63 (34th Sess. 1901). The Report also stated with respect to Section 659:

[The section as revised] . . . omits subdivision three referring to statements of the case, there being no reason to provide both for statements of the case and for bills of exceptions. Ibid.

The note to last section [658] said: ". . . There is nothing in the statement of the case that cannot be contained in a bill of exceptions, and this double designation is useless and perplexing. It is therefore omitted." Id. at 62.

¹³Cal. Stat. 1900-01, c. CII, § 124, p. 149.

¹⁴Cal. Stat. 1907, c. 386, p. 717. This revision did not eliminate the "statement of the case" and the cumbersome procedure for its settlement as had been done in 1901. This seems odd in view of the 1901 Commissioners' report but no explanation has been found.

¹⁵*Id.* at § 2, p. 717.

¹⁶Cal. Stat. 1915, c. 107, § 2, p. 201.

1. Section 659 was amended to provide that the time for filing and serving the notice of intention "shall not be extended by order or stipulation" and that the time for serving affidavits and counter affidavits could not be extended for more than 20 days.¹⁷

2. Section 660 was revised to introduce new devices for acceleration by providing that the hearing and disposition of a motion for new trial should have precedence over all other matters except criminal cases, probate matters and cases actually on trial; that it should be the duty of the court to determine the same at the earliest possible moment, that the power of the court to pass on the motion should expire three months after the verdict or "notice of the decision" [the Legislature apparently meant notice of entry of judgment]; and that a motion not determined in three months should be deemed denied.¹⁸

These amendments would appear to indicate that expeditious disposition of motions for new trial was still desired and that it had not yet occurred to anyone that the provision permitting service of the notice of intention in nonjury cases "within ten days after receiving notice of the entry of the judgment" would frustrate this goal in some cases.

In 1923 Section 660 was amended to reduce the time within which the court could determine a motion for new trial from three to two months and to provide that a motion not determined within the two month period should be deemed denied.¹⁹ This again emphasized the Legislature's intention to have motions for new trial disposed of expeditiously.

In 1929 Section 659 was amended to restore jury and nonjury cases to parity and to provide that in all cases the notice of intention to move for new trial must be served "within ten (10) days after receiving written notice of the entry of the judgment."²⁰ Section 660 was rearranged and reworded but without material change.²¹ The provision that the motion "must be heard at the earliest practicable time" was dropped. However, the provision according preference to the motion was retained as was the requirement that the court "determine the same at the earliest possible moment."²² The provision as to the allowable period for the determination of the motion was changed from two months to 60 days.

²⁰ Cal. Stat. 1929, c. 479, § 3, p. 841. The provisions as to the service of affidavits and counter affidavits and the extension of time for service were transferred to new Section 659a and reworded, but there was no change in substance.

²¹ Id. at § 5, p. 843.

²² Ibid. In lieu of the provision that the motion "must be heard at the earliest practicable time" Section 661 was enacted. Id. at § 6, p. 843. By this section (1) the clerk was required "upon the expiration of the time to file counter affidavits" to call the motion to the attention of the judge; (2) the judge was required to designate the time for oral argument, if any; (3) the clerk was required to give 5 days notice of the argument by mail and (4) the motion was required to be argued or submitted not later than 10 days "before the expiration of the time within which the court has power to pass on" it.

There has been no relevant amendment of Section 659 or Section 660 since 1929.²³

LAW OF OTHER JURISDICTIONS

A study has been made of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and of the statutes of 15 representative states to ascertain the time within which a motion for a new trial must be made and the event from which the time runs. The information disclosed is summarized in Table 1 infra.

Table 1 shows that in 12 of the 16 jurisdictions studied the time to move or give notice of intention to move for a new trial begins to run from an event of record—rendition of verdict, rendition of decision or entry of judgment—in both jury and nonjury cases.²⁴ In Idaho and Washington this is true in jury cases, the time running from the rendition of the verdict. In the latter jurisdictions the time does not begin to run until service of written notice of entry of judgment in nonjury cases and this is the rule for all cases in Nevada and Michigan.²⁵

Thus, Section 659 of the Code of Civil Procedure puts California in the company of a small minority of the jurisdictions studied. In the great majority of these jurisdictions it is an event of record and not notice thereof which starts the time to run within which to make a motion for new trial.

CONCLUSIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

The provision in Section 659 of the Code of Civil Procedure that the time to serve a notice of intention to move for new trial begins to run when notice of entry of judgment is received is undesirable. Since the Supreme Court recently reaffirmed in *Cowee v. Marsh*²⁶ the rule that any notice of entry of judgment which may be given by the clerk of the court is ineffective to start the time running, the time limitation hinges upon a voluntary and uncontrolled act of a party to the litigation. This creates the possibility that notice will not be given and that a motion for new trial may be made in such a case many years after judgment has been entered and has become final for purposes of appeal. It is not possible for a court to pass intelligently on a motion for new trial at a date so remote from the events upon which the motion is based. Section 659 should, therefore, be revised to eliminate the possibility of its being asked to do so.

Against this conclusion it might be argued that the party against whom the motion is made has no ground to complain inasmuch as it

²³ In 1933 Section 12a of the Code which refers to the computation of time was made applicable to Sections 659 and 659a and to the 60 day period for determination of motions for a new trial prescribed in Section 660. Cal. Stat. 1933, c. 29, §§ 5, 7, pp. 305, 306.

In 1951 Section 659 was amended to provide a 5 day notice period for a motion for a new trial made before the entry of judgment and while a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict is pending. Cal. Stat. 1951, c. 801, § 2, p. 2239. This change does not enter into the present inquiry.

²⁵ Rule 77(d) of the FEDERAL RULES OF CIVIL PROCEDURE requires the clerk of the district court to serve notice by mail of the entry of judgment. The time for new trial does not run from the service or receipt of such notice, however, but from entry of judgment.

²⁶ It should be noted, however, that in Michigan the right to make a motion for new trial may be terminated "on a date certain by the trial judge on motion of the opposite party." MICH. CT. RULES ANN. Rule 47, § 4, p. 538 (Mason 1948).

TIME FOR MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL

was his neglect in giving notice of entry of judgment to the moving party which makes possible the delayed motion for new trial. The answer to this argument is that the State has a larger interest in this matter than assessing the blame for long-delayed new trial motions as between the parties to the action—or, more accurately, their counsel. The burden on our courts in hearing and deciding such tardy motions for new trial and the larger interest in a speedy end to litigation which the Legislature has given special emphasis in the statutes dealing with disposition of motions for new trial justify an amendment to Section 659 to prevent a repetition of cases like Smith v. Halstead.²⁷

If the Legislature agrees with this conclusion an adequate remedy may be effected by amending Section 659 to provide that a motion for a new trial must be made, at the latest, within a specified time after the entry of judgment. To that end the following amendment is suggested:

659. Notice of Motion: Filing and Service, Time: Contents: Extension of Time. The party intending to move for a new trial must, either ~~(1) before the entry of judgment and, where a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict is pending, then within five (5) days after the making of said motion, or (2) within ten (10) days after receiving written notice of the entry of the judgment, before the entry of judgment or within ten days after the entry thereof~~ file with the clerk and serve upon the adverse party a notice of his intention to move for a new trial, designating the grounds upon which the motion will be made and whether the same will be made upon affidavits or the minutes of the court or both. Said notice shall be deemed to be a motion for a new trial on all the grounds stated in the notice. The time above specified shall not be extended by order or stipulation.

If Section 659 is to be amended as suggested, the last paragraph of Section 660 of the Code of Civil Procedure should also be amended as follows:

Except as otherwise provided in section 12a of this code, the power of the court to pass on motion for a new trial shall expire sixty ~~(60)~~ days from and after ~~the service on the moving party of written notice of the entry of the judgment, or if such notice has not theretofore been served, then sixty (60) days~~ after filing of the notice of intention to move for a new trial. If such motion is not determined within said period of sixty ~~(60)~~ days, or within said period as thus extended, the effect shall be a denial of the motion without further order of the court.

It may be objected that these proposed amendments would impose a hardship upon the party desiring to move for a new trial in that he would be required to examine the record or to consult the clerk to ascertain if and when judgment was entered. That this would be true in some cases is made clear by the provisions of Section 664 of the Code of Civil Procedure which governs entry of judgment:

664. When trial by jury has been had, judgment must be entered by the clerk, in conformity to the verdict within 24 hours after the rendition of the verdict (provided that in justice courts such judgment shall be entered in the docket at once), unless the court order the case to be reserved for argument or further consideration, or grant a stay of proceedings. When a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict is pending, entry of judgment in conformity to the verdict shall be automatically stayed until the court has rendered its decision upon the motion. If the trial, in a superior or municipal court, has been had by the court, judgment must be entered by the clerk, in conformity to the decision of the court, immediately upon the filing of such decision; in justice courts, judgment must be entered within 30 days after the submission of the cause. In no case is a judgment effectual for any purpose until entered.

It is apparent that under the provisions of Section 664 the time of entry of judgment will not be known to counsel without inquiry when (1) a case tried before the court without a jury is taken under submission or (2) in a jury case a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict is pending or the court has ordered the case reserved for argument or further consideration or has granted a stay of proceedings.

However, the suggested inconvenience to counsel does not seem to be a persuasive argument against amending Section 659. Moreover, the proposed change introduces nothing novel in requiring counsel to keep himself informed with respect to the date of entry of judgment in order to safeguard his client's rights. For example, under Rule 2(a) of the Rules on Appeal the date of entry of the judgment, not of notice thereof, is the date from which the time to appeal begins to run. Again, under Section 1033 of the Code of Civil Procedure a party is given 10 days after the entry of judgment to serve and file a memorandum of costs and no notice is required to start that time running. The date of entry of judgment having been found satisfactory with respect to these matters should serve as well to fix the date from which the time to give notice of intention to move for a new trial begins to run.

If the "hardship" objection is thought to be well taken, however, it could largely be obviated by either of two expedients:

1. The time period provided in Section 659 could be increased to more than 10 days. For example, it could be made co-extensive with the time within which to appeal, 60 days.
2. A statute could be enacted requiring the clerk of the court to mail a notice of the entry of the judgment to counsel for all parties. The time to give notice of intention to move for new trial would not begin to run from the sending or receipt of such notice but the party would in fact be put on warning when the notice was received. There is precedent for such a requirement. Section 667a of the Code of Civil Procedure requires the clerk or judge of a justice court to give notice of "the rendition of judgment" by mail or personally to the parties or their attorneys. And Rule 77(d) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure requires the clerks of the district courts to serve a notice by mail of "the entry of an order or judgment." Provision for such a notice could be made by enacting a new section of the code, patterned after the federal rule, as follows:

664.1. Immediately upon the entry of a judgment in superior and municipal courts the clerk shall serve a notice thereof by mail upon every party to the action who is not in default for failure to appear, and shall make a note in the docket of such mailing. Such notice shall be in substantially the form of the abstract of judgment required in Section 674 of this code.

SECTION 663a OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE: A RELATED PROBLEM

In considering the problem with respect to Section 659 it is to be noted that the same problem exists with respect to Section 663a of the Code of Civil Procedure. Section 663 of the code provides for motions to set aside and vacate judgments or decrees based upon findings made by the court or the special verdict of a jury. This is followed by Section 663a which provides in relevant part:

663a. The party intending to make the motion mentioned in the last section must, within ten days after notice of the entry of judgment, serve upon the adverse party and file with the clerk of the court a notice of his intention, . . .

In the interest of doing a complete job Section 663a should be amended as follows:

663a. The party intending to make the motion mentioned in the last section must, ~~within ten days after notice of the entry of judgment,~~ within ten days after the entry of judgment, serve upon the adverse party and file with the clerk of the court a notice of his intention, designating the grounds upon which, and the time at which the motion will be made, and specifying the particulars in which the conclusions of law are not consistent with the finding of facts, or in which the judgment or decree is not consistent with the special verdict. The time designated for the making of the motion must not be more than sixty days from the time of the service of the notice. An order of the court granting such motion may be reviewed on appeal in the same manner as a special order made after final judgment and a bill of exceptions to be used on such appeal may be prepared as provided in section six hundred and forty-nine.²⁸

. . . [I]f made after the entry of judgment such motion shall be made within the period specified by Section 659 of this code in respect of the filing and serving of notice of intention to move for a new trial.

However, as the time is thus fixed by reference to Section 659 the suggested change in that section would make amendment of Section 629 unnecessary.
